Lori,
(Having your B-Day is Days Before mine (Academy Award + 18)). I have a 1 year + seeing you each morning. Looked forward to to study the "Lats" & having you. All three of the Lats are with you. All three hope you are a great future & kind of sweet & in college you all have a great future et. al.

Lori

I really resent the lack of space. Nakul is being perverted signing so large a signature. There is no room for my obnoxiousness.

It is very strange how we have evolved over 2 years. Not that we have sprouted wings, but we have sprouted a bit of a friendship. From indifference to friendship — that's a nice progression. Actually I am extremely surprised we do have stuff in common. You have excellent taste in music.

Fine Lori, I won't be offended that there is a page reserved for everyone in your yearbook except ME! Well, I suppose that this is as nice a place as any (wait I have to sign Anne's yearbook - will get back to you in government) Well, I'm back (not that it makes a whole lot of difference), and as usual, we aren't doing anything. Government Movie, HA! Well, I feel really good about graduating - Caps & Gowns in purple look almost putrid. But their Caps & Gowns anyway.. !! I'm never going to pass BIOLOGY. I may not even show up for the final - what the hell. It really doesn't matter anyway, right? Wrong. I would still like to get into Princeton, even if they only accept twits like Josh & David Gilroy. I'm not sure I believe the concepts of Homeopathic medicine — but I've seen it work (what?) I am crazy. Or am I just insane? I'm looking forward to Prom (is this as incoherent as I think it is? Probably). I want to see guys dressed like penguins and girls

You are not the run of the mill non-sob I had thought. You are just intelligent and enthusiastic. I shall not be surprised if you go on to UVA and become a doctor or something. and then win the Miss Universe contest-

all dressed up-(and looking nice) Help!! I want to graduate, but have absolutely no desire to say good bye. But I don't want to see Mrs. Levin or Mr. Rumlik any more. Levin always looks like she's on the warpath— and Rudy— we won't discuss how he looks (to prevent from throwing up). Well, good luck Lori. Don't change. You're perfect just the way you are. Come back and see me sometime.

Pity I shall only get to see you at graduation. I know how you feel about swimming pools (not to mention cows) so I doubt we shall get to rap there. How nice

You have a good head on your shoulders and a nice body underneath. Use all of them at UVA.

Remember when you're a bit down that things are bound to become better, or else, you will die. Keep that thought in mind and blast B.S. in your ears

Academics 8-61

Which section of this literary and pictorial masterpiece informed students what exactly went on in school between the hours of 8:15 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.? In what section could a person find very interesting and entertaining copy and candid photographs of each and every faculty member, cafeteria worker and janitor? That's right, the Academics Section. Not only did Academics cover those courses labeled as "Academic" such as English, math, and science, but it also included the various other courses offered to the student body. Where else could a person read about the outstanding productions put on by the music and theatre department? Where else could one find intriguing photographs of art students working diligently on a ceramic sculptures or typing students pecking away at their manuscripts? Where else could one discover that, yes, there were cosmetology and auto mechanics classes where the students actually worked at their craft, whether it was a shampoo, cut and blow-dry, or peering under the hood of a car. The Academics section was able to cover the broad panorama of teachers and activities that were encountered at Lake Braddock.

People 62-209

The ultimate challenge... keeping track of over 4000 people packed into a building over a quarter of a mile long. By powers beyond earthly control, this Herculean task was placed into the hands of the yearbook People staff. Throughout the year, the vibrant energy and spirit of the student body was captured as they attended activities such as the Fall Festival, football games, pep rallies, and dances. The entire student body united as Lake Braddock entered a new decade. Thus the idea of a new beginning was permeated throughout all of the classes- from the fresh young seventh graders to the seasoned veteran seniors. As the year came to an end, the student body came closer to their goals and ambitions as a sparkling new decade began at Lake Braddock.

Sports 210-271

Lake Braddock has been known throughout the county of Fairfax for its big athletic department. With approximately nine hundred athletes participating in various athletic programs, students found a real challenge to make a team. There were special teams that have been recognized for their great performances. Out of the thirty-three select teams, Boys Varsity Soccer and Girls Gymnastics have been State Champions. Other Regional Champions include: softball, wrestling, Boys and Girls Track and Field, and Cross Country. With such a large athletic department, many students had the opportunity to participate in a wide variety of sports.

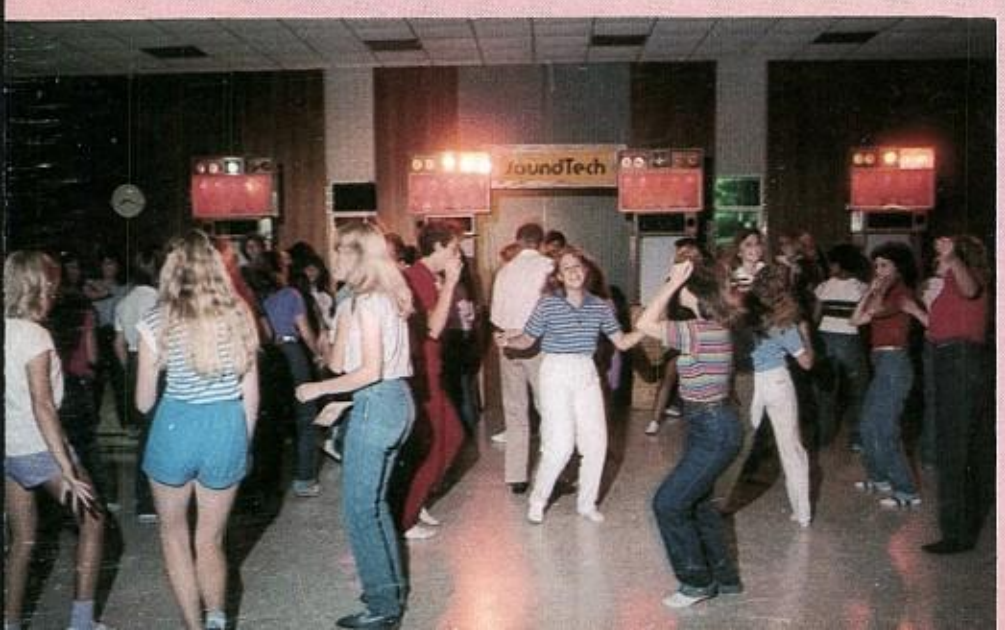
Student Life
272-325

As school began and summer ended, Lake Braddock was bigger and better than ever. Although Student Life went through numerous changes over the years; such as fads, fashions, music, hobbies, hangouts, and hairstyles, some things remained ever present like holding jobs and sharing good times with friends. Furthermore, throughout the year, students along with teachers participated in extra-curricular activities. Also, living in such a large area gave students the opportunity to meet new people, discover interesting places, and take in local sights. In addition, having such a large school, students showed their enthusiasm and spirit by participating in activities such as class night, Fall Follies, dances, and football games.



Organizations
326-363

After seven long hours of tests and tedious assignments, most students needed a break. Service, educational and social clubs proved to be a refreshing diversion. A wide variety of clubs insured that all students were able to find at least one organization that catered to their interests. Honor societies helped members to recognize and develop their talents, while clubs, such as Tri-Hi-Y and Safety Council, provided much needed services to the school and community. In addition, the Pep club and Marching Band continued to boost school spirit at athletic events. For interests not yet represented, new clubs, such as the Satirists, were formed and even further expanded the large selection of organizations. As a result of the hard work and dedication of each club member, this year was made a big deal!!

BIG DEAL

At 8:15 A.M. on August 29, enrollment at Lake Braddock was at an all time high of 4,349-400 students greater than the building was intended to hold. The brick, air-conditioned, semi-carpeted, two-story structure used to house the vast number of students contained 533,660 square feet, a main hall that stretched across one-fifth of a mile, seemingly countless classrooms, a gym with a seating capacity of 3,000, a theater with 688 seats, and a cafeteria with eight food lines and a capacity of 800 seats. Built on 60.5 acres of Fairfax County land, the edifice was surrounded by a 6,000 seat football stadium, a track, numerous practice fields, baseball and softball diamonds, eight tennis courts, a driver education range, and a 500 car parking lot. Not only the physical aspects of Lake Braddock were on a large scale, but also the extra-curricular activities seemed boundless. These included one of the largest sports departments in the state, and clubs and organizations to suit the varying interests of students. Lake Braddock maintained a "theme of excellence in education" by employing 289 teachers, 12 administrators, and offering a wide spectrum of classes. Vocational courses, business classes, computer science, music, drama, art, journalism, and the traditional academic courses were all offered. New course additions in '84 included the implementation of the Gifted and Talented (GT) program for those wanting more intellectually challenging classes. Changes for the 1983-84 year were not limited to course selection. The absence of homeroom, the ban on alcohol insignias on t-shirts and in lockers, a reinforced effort to stop drug, alcohol, and tobacco use during school, a cement bear built before graduation in 1983 were all noticeable changes. All facts considered, Lake Braddock was definitely a BIG DEAL. Despite the monumental size of the school, it was extremely organized and well run. Students and faculty worked together and continued to rise above barriers in efforts to improve education and the environment in which students learned, thus helping to make a BIG DEAL out of Lake Braddock.

Big Deal

Even the name Lake Braddock Secondary hinted at the BIG size of the school. The first glimpse of the oversized halls, multi-purpose gym, and huge cafeteria left many students amazed. To several seventh graders fresh out of Kings Glen, White Oaks or most any other elementary school, Lake Braddock was a place for exploring and getting lost. If getting lost didn't make a person late for every class period, then running from P.E. to art to music did. As one seventh grader, Kevin Barber said, "It's kind of exciting running across from one end of the school to another between classes, instead of staying in the same room all day." Even with such large halls, great swarms of people often crowded them between classes making it necessary to "...weave in and out or else you can only move inch after inch," as seventh grader Kanu Jerath described it. After three periods of class, Pete Grace liked going to lunch and being able to choose from a huge variety of food. "You can get just about anything you want- from pizza to fruit-pies!" For those seniors who had been here since seventh grade, or even ninth grade, the school wasn't at all intimidating. It didn't seem to matter if he building seemed smaller or bigger. Mr. Petty, a drama and past English teacher who had been here since the school opened said, "I like to think that it's not the size of the school that matters, but what the people inside do with it." Each student who came to Lake Braddock, for no matter how short or long a time, molded his own view of the school. No matter how big or how small the school seemed, Lake Braddock would always be a BIG DEAL.

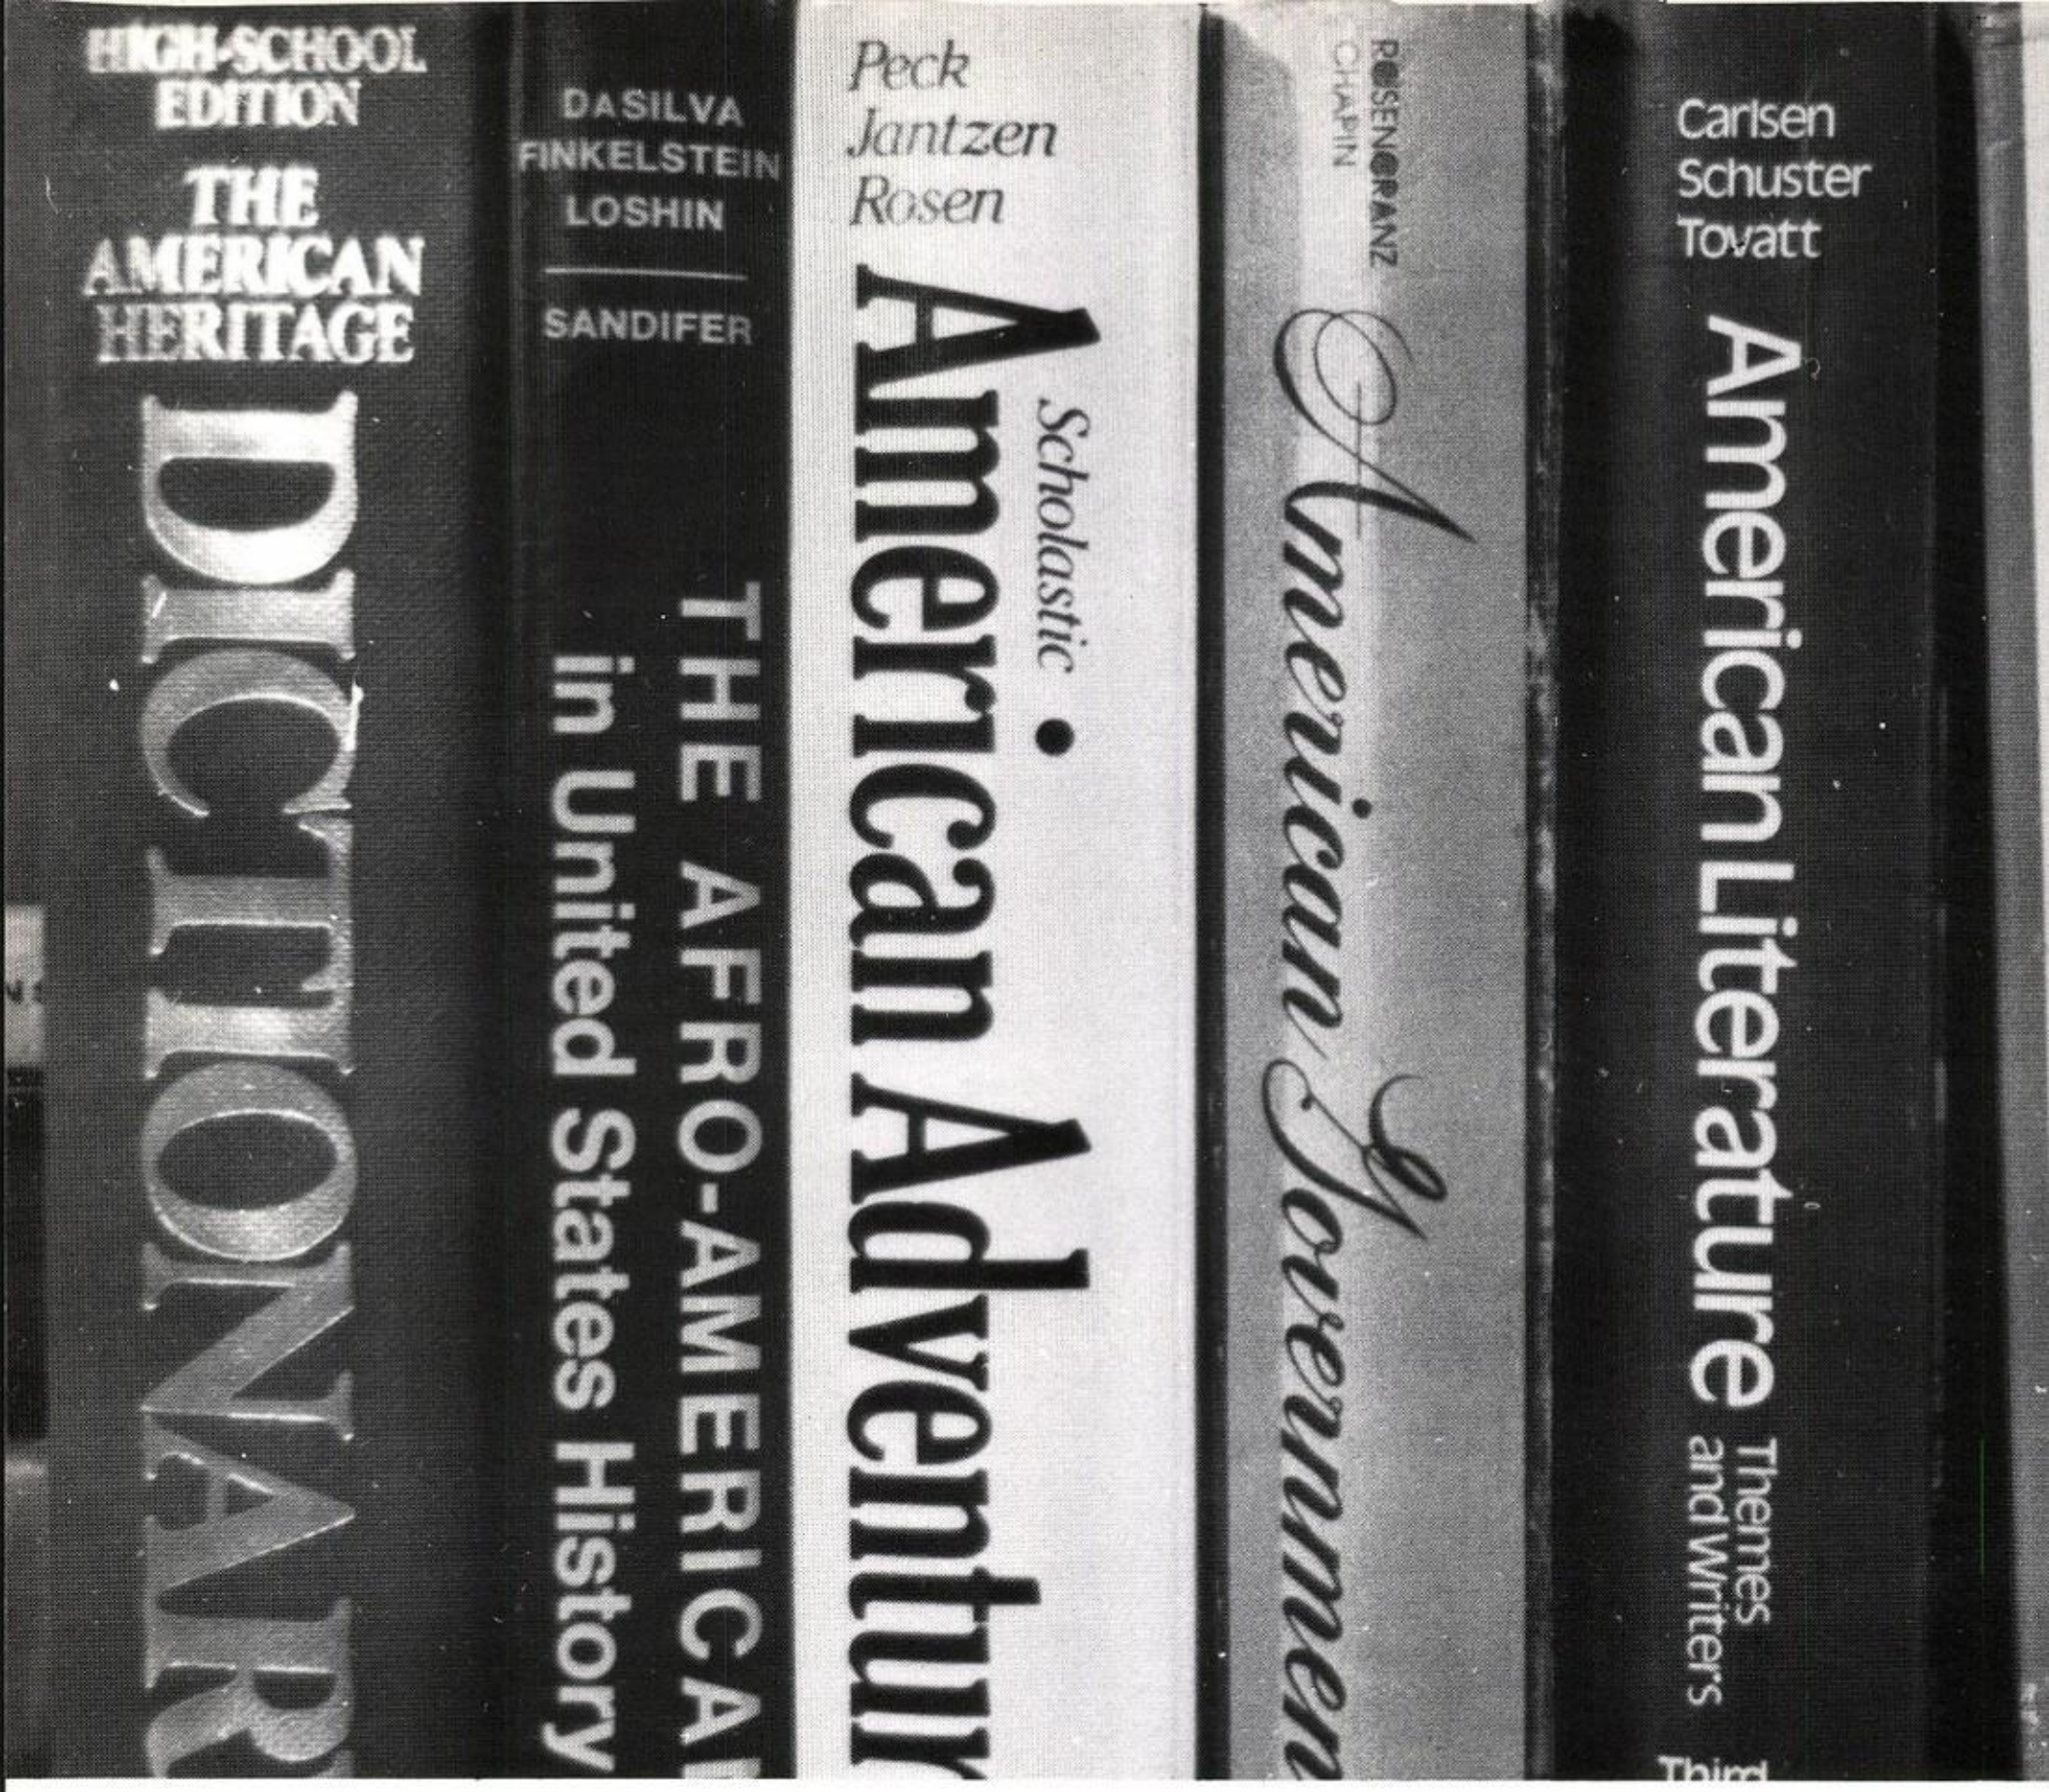
Lori,
I wanted a whole page too, Lori. It was good to have you in Spanish for 2 years and all that. Good luck at UVA and maybe I'll see you there. If I do you have to tell me about all the party places and things this year but college will be one big party. If you come back next year to any football games watch for me and cheer us on #33 probably. And later games I'll drink more than water. Like that picture ↖. Well take care, have a great summer and I'll see you somewhere, somehow. Steve Smith



Lori,

I feel this rap is appropriate for me to write on.

Well, what can I say? O.K. Here I go...

This year has been a blast! I'm glad we got to be good friends. You're so much fun to be around. How about that party at Tom's. Yeah, Buddy!

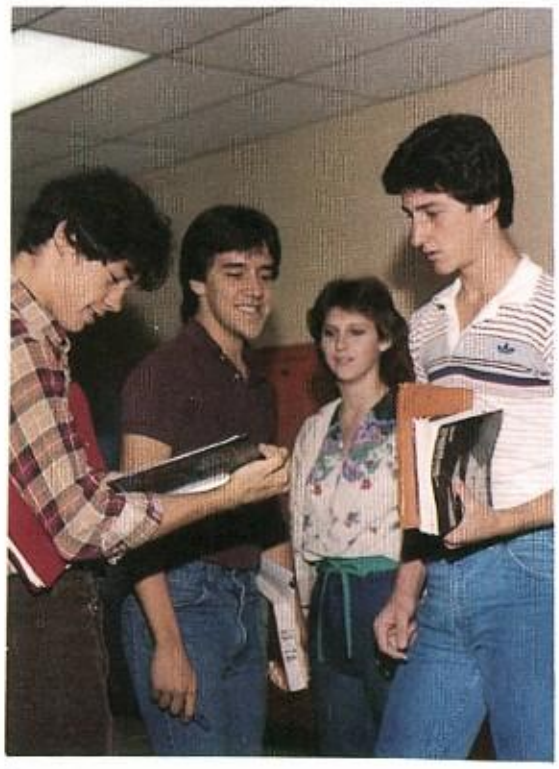
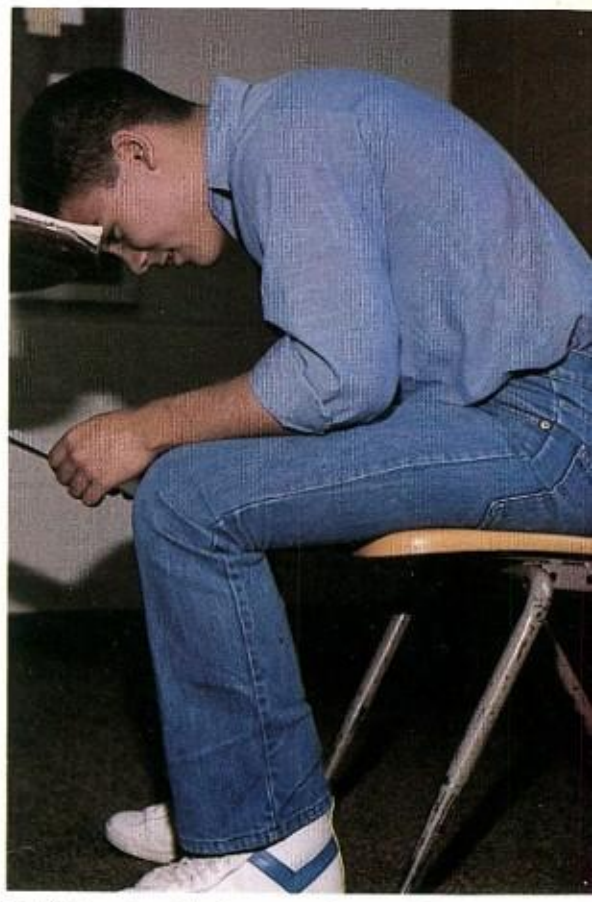
NEW ADDITIONS

At the subschool 4 office Ron Kaus has a question about his schedule.

A higher enrollment of both students and teachers caused various changes to be made at Lake Braddock. New lockers were added to try to accommodate the 4,349 students. Additional programs were put into both the intermediate and high school levels to allow students to have more challenging classes. If certain qualifications were met, high school students could enroll in a Gifted and Talented course, while seventh graders could participate in a GT center. Students and teachers alike worked to make use of the changes in a way that everyone would benefit.



Standing in front of their lockers before lunch are Brian Mewhinney,Gary Powers, Lorrie Echard and Bobby Thomas.



Walking to their second period class are Jolene Lash and Jay Whetzel.

Lore,

Thank-you for what you wrote, it was really sweet. I'm very glad that we got to become good friends this year. If I get a little obnoxious at parties sometimes. — I'm glad! Our Spanish class was fun last year, but I always felt like you would rather be talking to someone else. We did have a good time busting on Mr. Bicycle himself. I wish we had some classes together this year cause I really enjoy → talking with you. You're easy to talk with and I always get a lot out of our conversations. We really should do something over the summer, if not sooner. I had a good time at the movies. I hope you did too. The beach should be great. Hopefully I'll see you down there. We could go out to eat or something. How about "OR something." I think you should have gotten me out of first period with a pass & we could have rapped. Next year you better come down & see me at U.NC. It'll be a blast. Anyway, I can't believe our senior year is finally over. It seems like just yesterday I was in 7th grade. I can't really tell if I've enjoyed it that much, I think you're a really sweet and good looking girl. I hope you have the best of luck next year at school,

EXPANDING HORIZONS

Throughout the school, students freed themselves from the normal academic classes by taking one of the various vocational art classes that suited their fancy. In this class new experiences waited for those inside. In art, plain sheets of paper bloomed into polished artistry. Students in auto mechanics sharpened and tuned their skills while repairing tools and cars. Those students interested in cosmetology carefully shaped and styled hair of students and faculty members. Finally, students who loved to cook prepared luncheons and special meals for the staff. The Home Economics Department also held child development classes where students worked with children in a day care center atmosphere. All together, these classes helped students gain experience in specific fields which will never be forgotten.

P.S. Thank-you for your note after we lost to Robinson. That was really sweet. I'm sorry about the mess up last weekend and don't forget about Chi, Chi's.

CLASS OR JOB?

Bcth!! Students at Lake Braddock this year found SGA, Yearbook, Bear Facts, and Photojournalism to be more than just classes - they became jobs. Furthermore, these classes became increasingly popular among the Bruins. The sponsors of these programs felt that the major reasons for the popularity lent itself to the fact that students enjoyed the freedom, responsibility, and excitement of the actual coordinating, making decisions, and the writing, accompanying these courses. Although there was no 'homework' associated with the classes, pupils detected a great amount of responsibility and work. Within the journalism classes, staff members found interviews to take, copy and layout to finish, and deadlines to meet. SGA students discovered similar tasks such as organizing committees for SGA sponsored events, coordinating chaperones, advertising, and selling tickets for these events. With all considered (hard work and frustrating moments), students finished their work with a greater sense of accomplishment than in many of their other classes because they just did not learn - they produced!

ROAD TO SUCCESS

Were Dr. Alwood's second period announcements ever listened to? If they were, students might have heard him mention one of the various awards that the Bruin Music Department received throughout the year. Since there were more students involved in music this year than ever before, it took a lot of effort on everyone's part to coordinate their musical abilities to perfection. Their efforts, however, were balanced by the rewards of being a top-rated Music Department. Many afterschool rehearsals, as well as home practice, were necessary to perfect every musical production. Every performing group demanded and received the best from all its members. Thus, perfection stayed at the top of everyone's list. As a result, many top honors went to the musical Bruins, making everyone "Proud To Be A Bruin."

MELODY MAKERS

"I know band directors who make their bands work harder by telling them they are competing against Lake Braddock," commented Symphonic Band's percussionist Norm Frigault. Certainly, Lake Braddock's Music Department has built the reputation of being the toughest competition in the state. Most of their success has been due to the dedication and hard work of both students and instructors, and it certainly paid off. From the Symphonic Chorale and Swing Singers' top honors at the annual Festival competition to the band's numerous top awards, Lake Braddock has made itself known to all high schools in Virginia. It is this reputation that will continue to motivate the intermediate choirs and bands to carry on the award winning tradition at Lake Braddock.

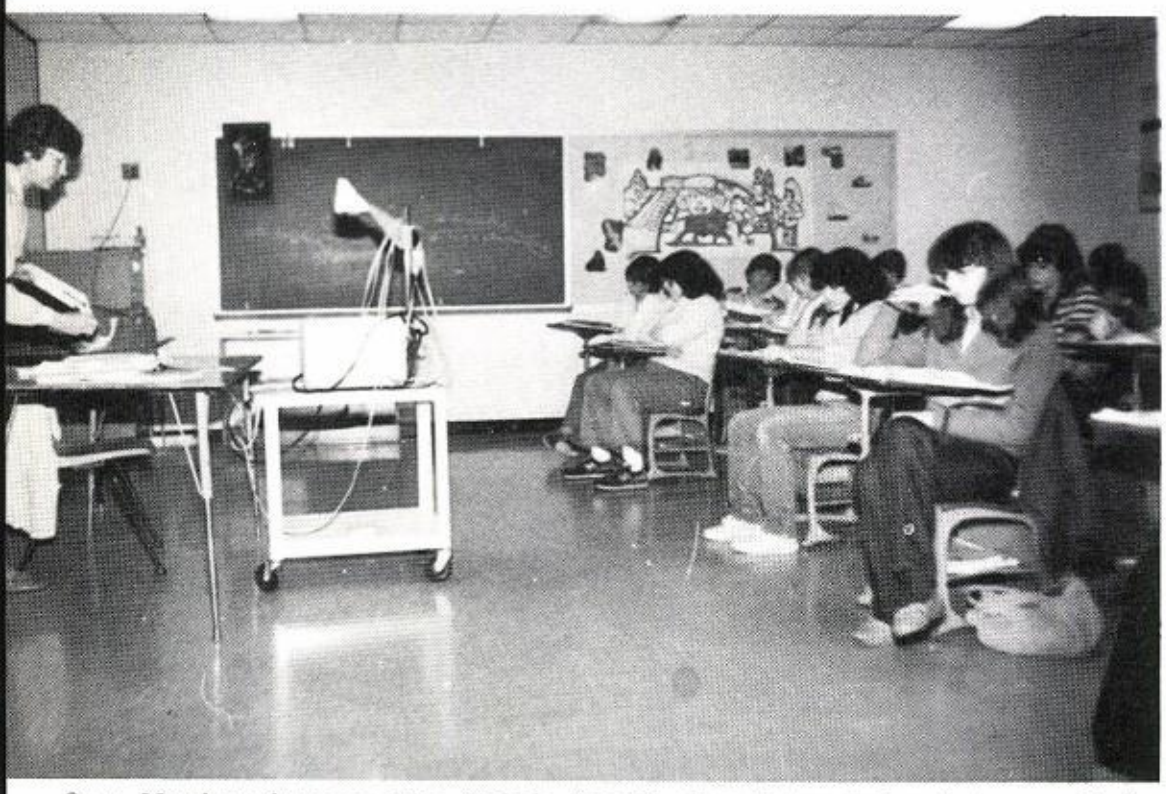
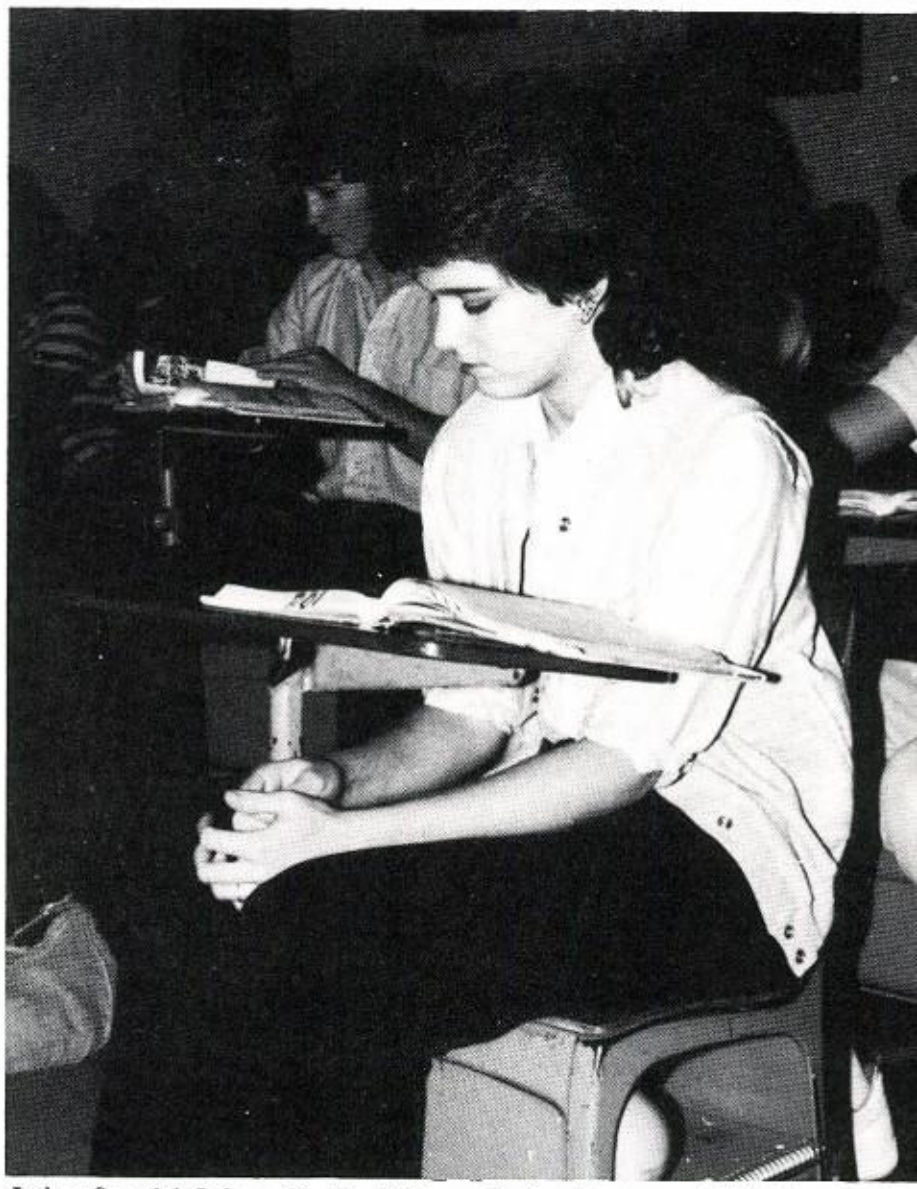
TRAVELING ABROAD

Participating in a foreign language had some interesting advantages. In addition to learning grammar, vocabulary, and some knowledge of the country, students were also able to practice their skills in a day-to-day environment. During spring break, students had a chance to visit Spain or France. Mrs. Dent sponsored the Spanish trip while Mrs. Garcia guided the participants through France. Students were able to explore Paris, Versailles, St. Malo, or Madrid, Toledo, and Salamanca. Meanwhile, German students came to visit America. At the end of their week, they knew that they would probably see some of our students in Germany the next summer. Students involved in a foreign language found that learning a language had some pleasant rewards.



On a Monday afternoon, Mrs. Kuhn's Spanish class listens to her lecture on Latin America.

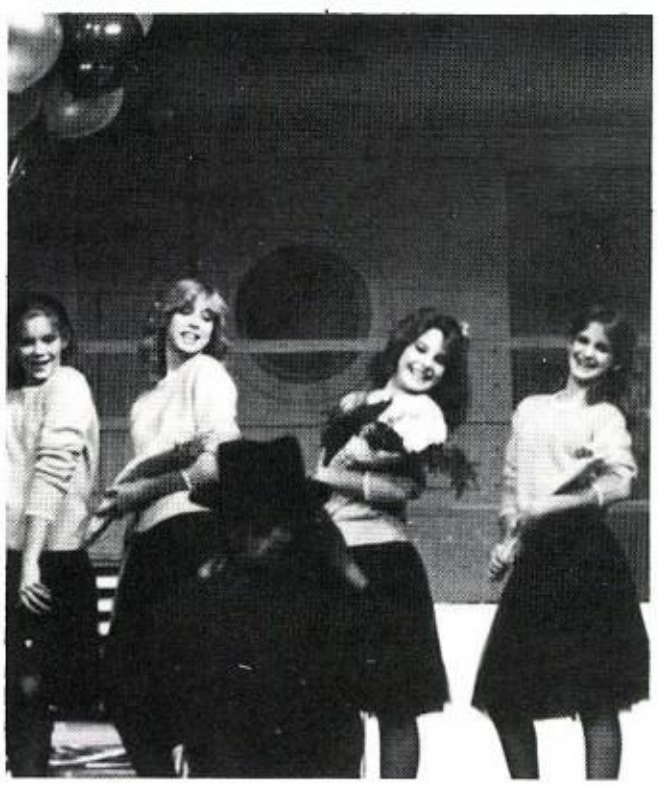
As the end of 4th period draws to a close, Susan Hagenlock studies her Spanish vocabulary for a quiz the next day.



In her Spanish I class, Shelley Kish works hard to try and finish her exercises before the bell rings.

WORKING HARD

Setting out to entertain students and families was a job that the drama department took very seriously. Holding many shows during the school year, including "Anything Goes," the drama department had to work extremely hard. Tryouts for students was one of the top priorities. Karen Stark, Rick Berry, Sherry Adams, and Jason McGraw were some of the stars in the production of "Anything Goes." Once the selection for the cast had been made, students began rehearsing. To insure that the show would prove to be successful, students devoted their class hours, weekends, and evenings to practicing their lines and routines. Throughout the school year, the drama department worked hard to provide enjoyable shows to students and their families.



In the show "Anything Goes, Adam Perna calls for the last passengers to board.

GROWING UP IS HARD TO DO

"Sevies,""Munchkins,"and "Little People" are some of the names the upperclassmen called the seventh graders. However, no one seemed to remember that they too had the same problems adjusting to junior highschool life. The faculty of Subschool 1 did foresee the difficult adjustments for the seventh graders and worked very hard to make the seventh graders' first year in junior high a fun and productive one. Organizing study time, getting used to having six teachers, staying after school, finding buses, and managing lockers were some of the things the faculty helped the students with. "We also try to get them acclimated to being in such a large school...It's very scary for the students at first,"commented Mrs. Oliver, Subschool 1 counselor."We're here to help them and to give them some identity as a group." At the end of the year, every seventh grader felt more at home in Lake Braddock as a result of the faculty's efforts.

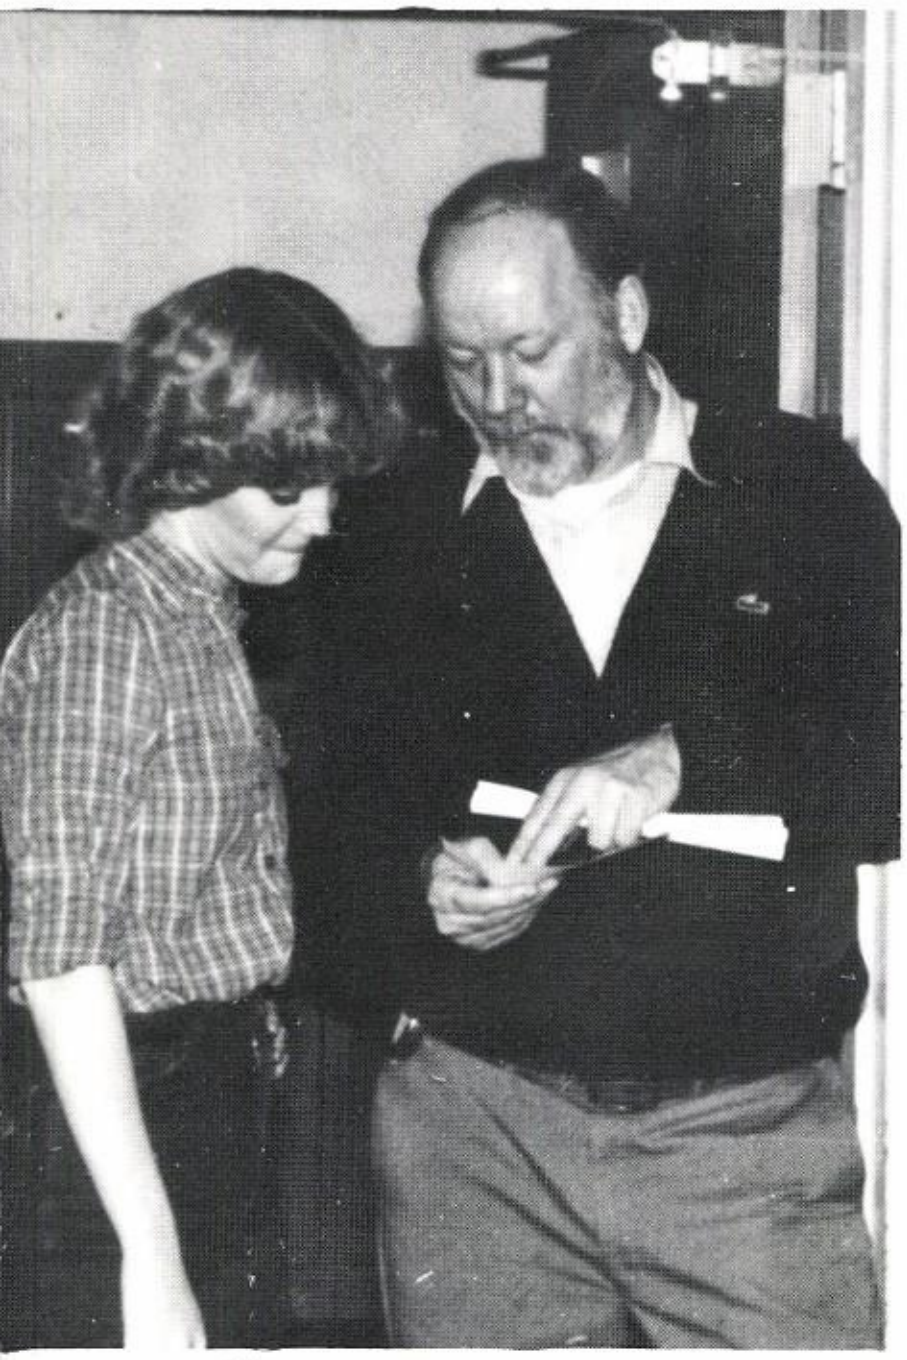
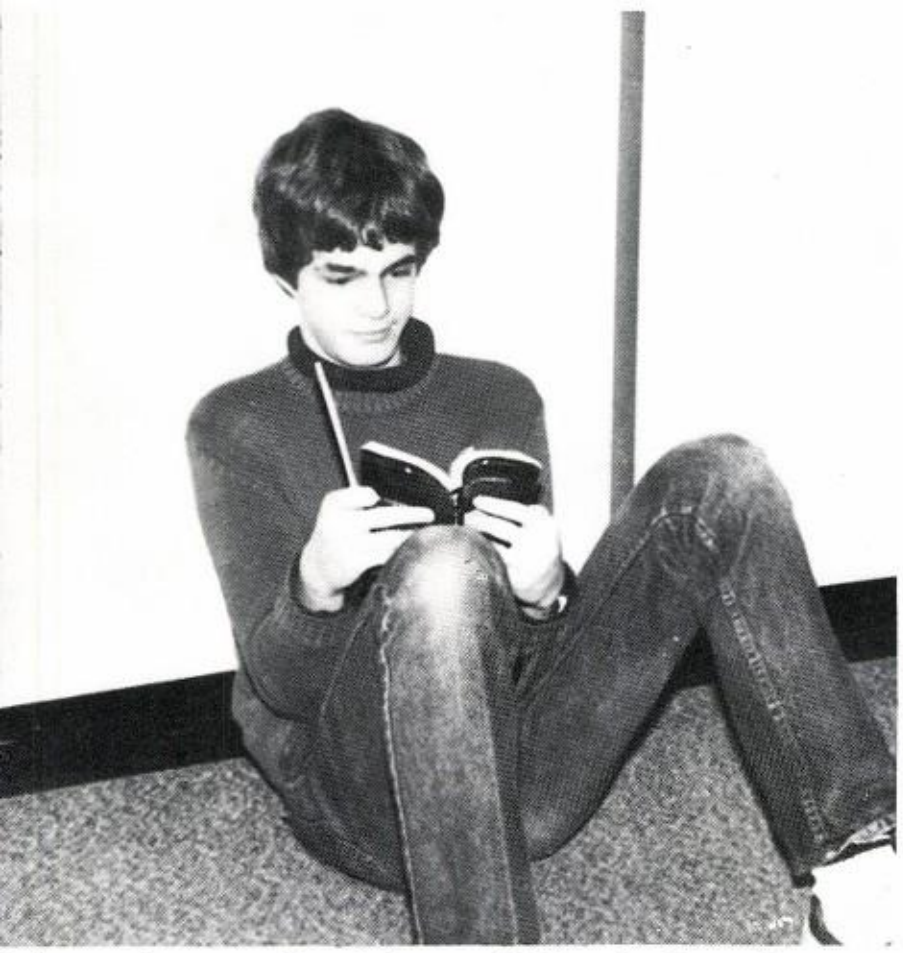
During 6th period, Terri Lenard consults with her drama teacher, Mr. Petty, over her new lines.



A CHANGE OF PACE

The Class of '88 experienced many new changes during the school year. Through history class, students produced, advertised and sold items at their Country Fair. The fair was such a success that almost everyone that participated earned a reasonable profit. A similar success occurred within the subschool's math department. For the first time in Lake Braddock's history an all-eighth grade algebra class was taught by Mr. Troia and Mrs. Brother. Another change experienced was the directory. Under the supervision of the sponsor Mr. Studt and Miss Jahoda, a listing of student names and phone numbers was produced. Representatives from different classes collected the necessary data and the class officers designed and assembled the directory which was printed at school and then later sold. Over all, most eighth graders enjoyed the changes and were glad to have shared them with close friends over the school year.



inding a quiet corner, Vern Bybee uses his free time by reading a re-uired book for his English class.

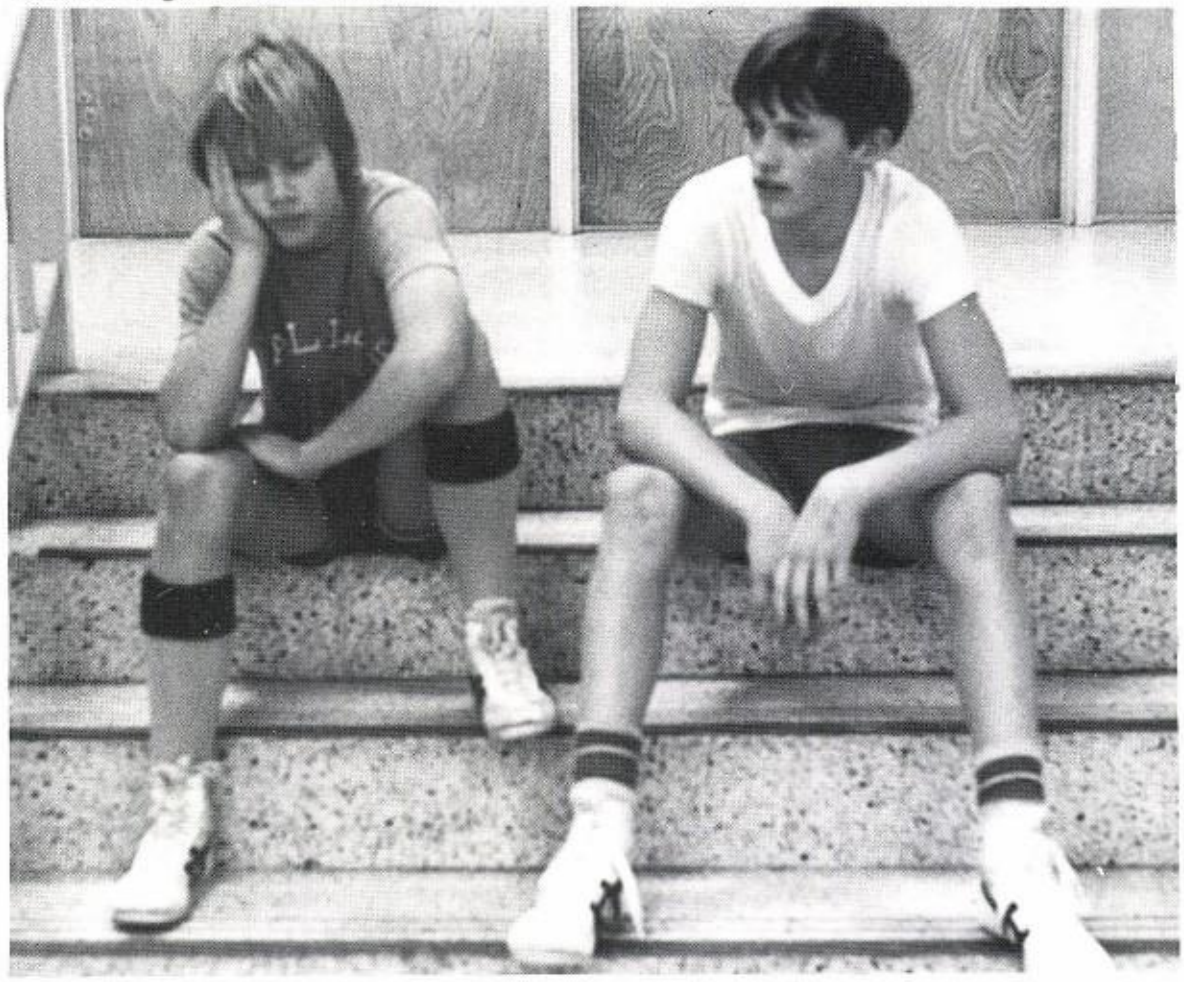
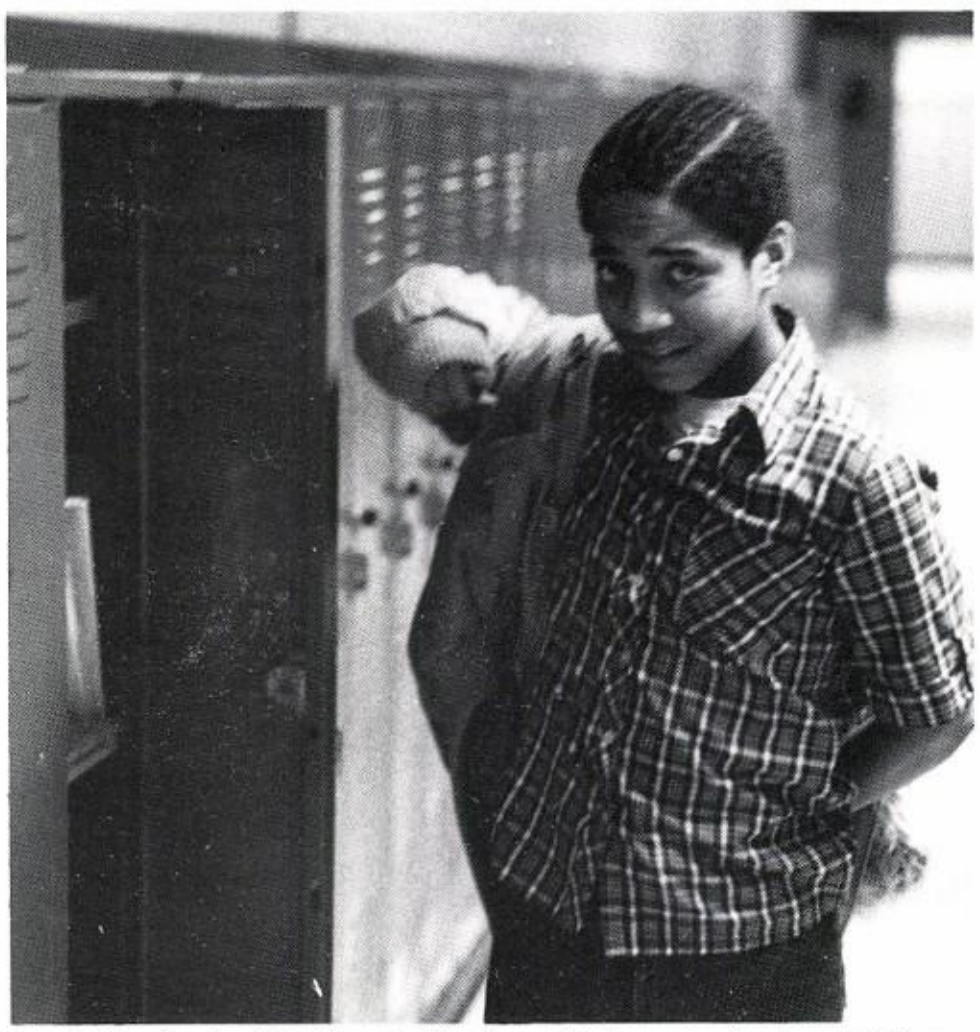
After a grueling wrestling practice, Freshmen David Somerville and Rob Goldsmith take five before calling home for a ride.



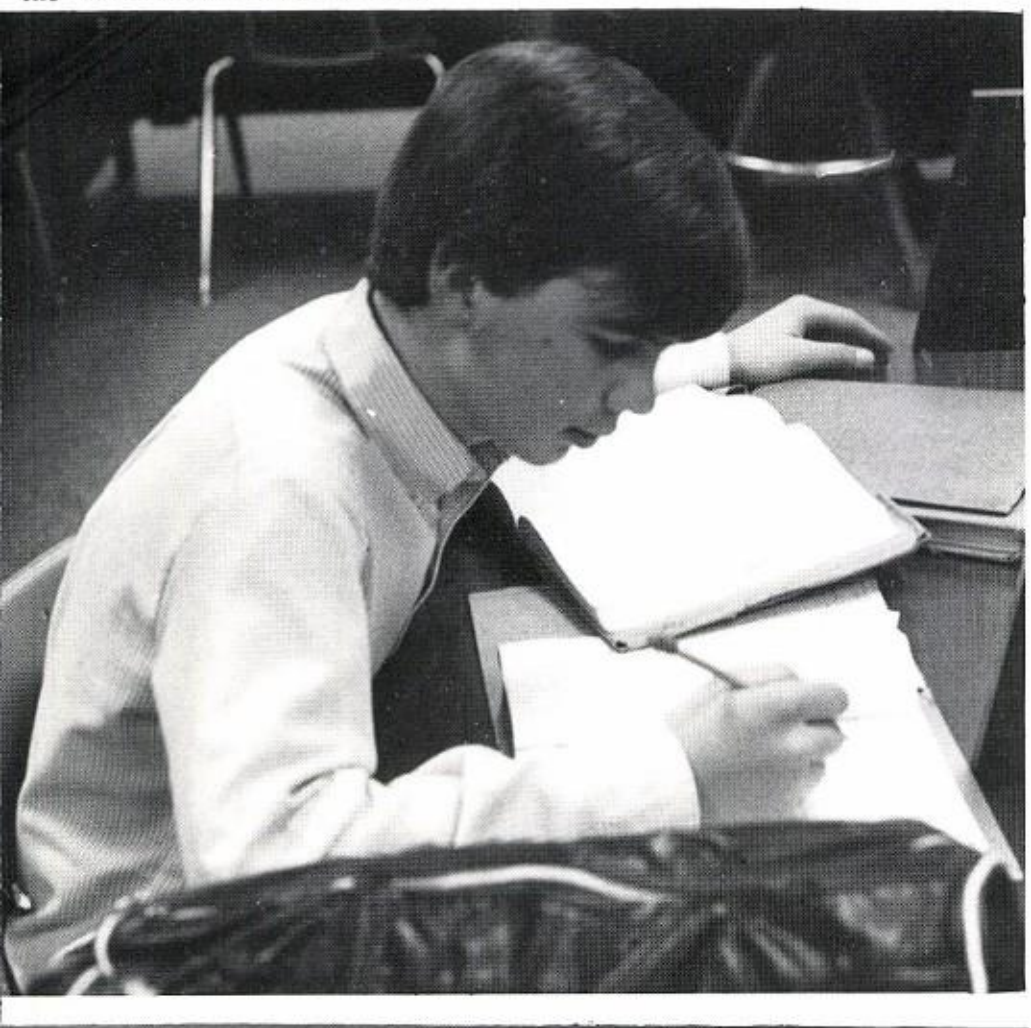


Hurriedly slipping into his coat, Freshman Vic Lopez rushes to catch his bus.

Following some after-school practicing, Cindy Evans puts away her instrument and sheet music before walking home.

In his third period orchestra class, Ben Warner practices his quartet music for an upcoming performance.

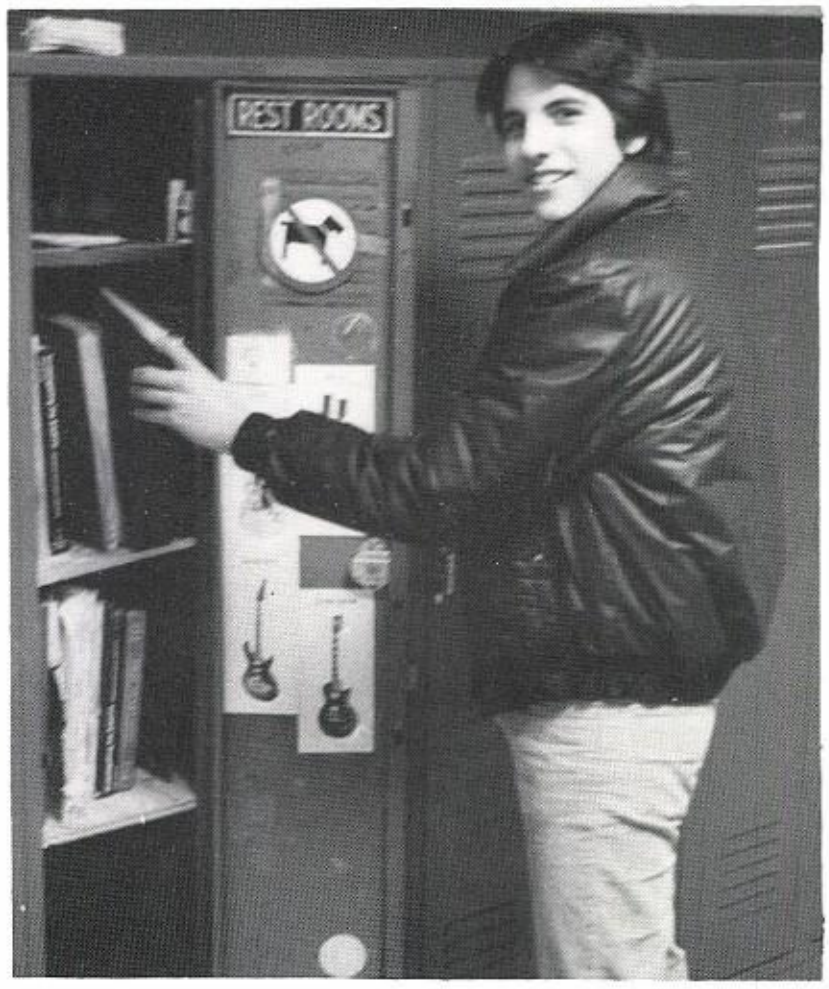
While waiting for his late bus, Marty Daniells finishes his geometry homework in the Subschool III media center.



YOUNG BLOOD

For the freshmen, the young blood of the high school grades, Subschool III was filled with a variety of activities and friends. Students discovered classes for many of their interests, and the subjects taught were enjoyed by the majority of the students. Algebra I teachers attempted to make learning more challenging and interesting with a unit on computers. Pupils were required to make up a program and learn the basic skills. In the English Department, Mr. Greek began a program for his GT students called "The Little Red School Van," in which students were to travel to various elementry schools and perform skits and scenes from assorted novels such as Great Expectations. As Delphine Omkar commented,"Students are putting more effort toward their work. The administration is being very cooperative by offering extra help after school which adds to the warm atmosphere of Subschool III."

Before receiving credit for having passed the required health course, all students must demonstrate their knowledge of bandaging a bleeding victim. Freshmen Gretchen Rinehart and Diane Ramsey are shown demonstrating the type of bandage used for a victim with a serious head wound.



Before going to his last class, Andy Myers gathers all his homework for the weekend.

In her journalism class, Leslie Sattler works on completing her assignment.

A sign of '86 spirit, the bear head from the Homecoming float rests in the Subschool 4 office.

Typing is hard and sometimes frustrating work, as the look on Karen Malachowski's face demonstrates.

Anxious to get to their next class, Greg Pavich and Andrea Meeks thread their way through the crowded hall.

MOVIN' UP

As a part-time secretary in SS 4, Mrs. Brigidini writes out absentee passes in the early morning.

axophone playing is an exciting job, so David Druid devotes himself to it ntirely.

To provide a smoother transtion from ninth to tenth grade for class of '86 students, an experiment was put to the test. The entire staff of Subschool 3, Prinicipal Mr. Watts, Counselors Mrs. Pauley and Mrs.Deckel, and Secretary Mrs. Pry moved to Subschool 4 with the students. This gave the counselors and the principal an opportunity to know more students and to strengthen the relationships with the ones that they already did know."I feel very strongly about this move. We know the students, and their background, enabling us to make better decisions and to give better guidance to them," commented Mrs. Pauley. The feeling was mutual on the part of the students, too. "I feel that I could go and talk to my counselor or Mr. Watts if I ever needed to," remarked Mae Carabeo. The year ran more smoothly as a result of the move, with students and faculty feeling more at home with each other. However, the move will not be repeated again in 1985, as it would cause too many conflicts.

GREAT PLANS

Did you ever wonder what the Career Center was all about or what kind of material you could find there? According to Mrs. Saafield, one could find material dealing with neighborhood job openings, and career interest and opportunities in a variety of fields. In addition, one could also find college information such as profiles on colleges, financing, scholarship information, and entrance examinations material. For Juniors and Seniors, the Career Center was a lifesaver. Seniors, who needed last minute information about possible colleges, could be seen frantically searching through the many reference materials. Juniors, who wanted to get a head start on research for opportunities after high school, could also be found in the Career Center. Both classes took advantage of the sessions with college representatives, and some even signed up to receive important information from the center's computer. Finally, the general consensus among the Juniors and Seniors was that when one has to make such an important decision about one's life, it was nice to have some help.

The Career Center offers more than college information, as Nancy Baker and Karen Tisdel find job openings in their neighborhood.

Lori,
It was one hell of a senior year. Calculus was great with all the hard work we did to pass. I wish you the best of luck in the future with whatever you do. Beware of the College guys. And also the wild party's. #Ave fun & GET WASTED.
Love, Alan

POLITICIANS

Any stranger who walked into the Little Theatre on April 10th and 11th would have thought that the big-wigs in Washington had chosen Lake Braddock for the site of their Democratic Convention. After further investigating the matter, they found that the candidates, the delegates, everyone involved were... teenagers. What was going on? Every Presidential election year, all the government and history students of Subschools five and six participated in a mock convention. What better way to learn the processes of a political convention than to be in one? The students were involved in everything from planning and forming committees to acting as delegates and candidates. The only role that was not enacted by a student was that of the keynote speaker. For that role, a public figure from the Washington-Virginia area was invited to participate. When asked about the effectiveness of having the convention, head co-ordinator Judy Colocotronis replied,"The mock convention is a really good hands-on experience. The students get a lot more out of actually doing than they would by reading a stack of books."

Dr. John Alwood, Mrs. Susan deCorpo, Mr. Chuck Rembold, Mrs. Nancy Bard, Mr. Bob Carson, and the six subschool principals comprised the '83-'84 administrative staff. Two of these members came to the school for the first time. The Director of Services was a new position that was filled by Mr. Chuck Rembold. Dr. Bob Davis' position, as Subschool V principal was vacated in the middle of the year. However, Mrs. Susan deCorpo returned to the school as Associate Principal after a seven year absence.In addition to running the school effectively and efficiently, the administrative staff worked together to see that absenteeism diminished and the amount of litter was reduced.

ROVING MINSTREL

During the summer weeks while many people were relaxing at the beach, Carl Bly and his family were living a child's fantasy traveling with Carso & Barnes 5 Ring Circus. The evidence of his interest decorated the walls of his office, showing off Mr. Bly's avid interest in the circus world. Traveling with the circus in the Midwestern U.S., Mr. Bly, his wife and two daughters all experienced the circus world. Mrs. Bly played the piccolo with the circus band, while Mr. Bly worked security at one of the exits during the two daily performances plus other odd jobs. "We moved every day-sometimes only 60 miles or so -we'd do two shows, be packed by 11:00 and move on," commented Mr. Bly. "I remember one time the ground was so muddy we literally had to pull the show out of the mire with the elephants. It's a unique way of life. . . . You have to enjoy it."

Sandy's letter to Michael is one of the many lines from Free To Be... You and Me... presented by the Lake Braddock faculty in September during the Fall Festivle. Under the direction of Suzy Slosky, thirty-six faculty members, includind three principals, gathered afterschool everyday in preparation for the day when they shared their acting, dancing and singing abilities. Performances were given by some of the well known faculty members such as Dr. Alwood, Mr. Bailey, Miss Jahoda, Mr. Stein and Mr. Studt. Glued to their seats, the audience caught the spirit of the show and found themselves laughing at the humorous actions and dialogue, empathizing with the more facetious developments. The show ended with the song, "Glad to Have a friend Like You."

What happened in June, when that last bell rang and the last exam was finished? For most students it signified a time to rejoice, go to the beach, find a job, or just relax. But what did the teachers do during the three months of summer? At Lake Braddock there was a variety of summer experiences among the staff. Many did not take a vacation from teaching and instead taught summer school. Some, like the students, decided to take it easy or go to the beach. Others found escape through extensive traveling from the U.S., to Europe, to the Far East, and even to Russia. Still others returned to school and completed their degrees. Finally, there were those teachers who found very different occupations to fill their time. Such occupations included traveling with a circus, touring with the National Girls Fastpitch Softball Team, working on Capitol Hill, selling real estate, taking care of a new baby, and working as a docent at Wolf Trap. All in all, the summer was made to fit each and every one's interests so that each enjoyed the summer immensly.

Copy, captions, layouts, croppers: all of these terms that were foreign to the Lair staff's new sponsors had to be mastered. By the time the first deadline had come and gone, Mrs. Joan Strokes and Mrs. Joan Frie began seeing various items related to yearbook such as eaten disks and crashing margins in their sleep. Mrs. Strokes mentioned dreaming about giant croppers chasing her around the yearbook room and Mrs. Frie dreamed she was a disk being eaten by the computer work processor. Although they encountered many of the problems that came along with being novices, they enjoyed the challenge and excitment of putting together a $50,000 yearbook for more than 4,000 students. As sponsors, Strokes and Frie were responsible for arranging yearbook sales, underclass and make-up pictures, approving pages and most of all, seeing that everything was run smoothly. When the year came to an end, and the last page was turned in, the sponsors were quoted as saying, "A-MEN! But look out; we're coming back for more next year."

BUCKLE UP

Have you ever been told by your teacher to "Buckle Up"? This was not a new experience for anyone that took Drivers Education. Taking the place of Physical Education for one quarter, students learned driving rules, cautions, and laws, thus learning the importance of defensive driving. The class was taught by Mrs. Hilda Hall who had taught Drivers Education for more than thirteen years. Orginally teaching at Annandale High School, she has taught at Lake Braddock for eleven years. Mrs. Hall commented that the kids taking the class seemed much more enthusiastic and cooperative than in other classes. Once the students completed Drivers Education, they had to take fourteen hours of Behind-The-Wheel before they could earn their license. After taking Mrs. Hall's class, students left with knowledge which they would use for the rest of their lives.

A LITTLE EXTRA

Without teacher sponsors, many of the extracurricular clubs and activities that students enjoyed through the year would not have been possible. Marriane Weber, subschool five counselor, for example, was the sponsor of the Pep Club, which promoted school spirit. Jan Hilten and Kay Mikula, biology teachers, worked with the award winning cheerleaders. Teachers Betty Bartelmes and Carol Walia sponsored the Latin and French Clubs; they worked with clubs which related to the subjects they taught during the day. All teacher sponsors showed their interest in the student body by contributing their time and effort to these activities. Throughout the year, after school life proved to be exciting for both the students and their sponsors.

Food...the way to a teacher's heart. When teachers were not concerned with classwork and students, a frequently heard question concerned the best place to eat in the metropolitian area. Chez Francois of Great Falls seemed to be the overwhelming favorite restaurant for the special evenings. Even during work days, teachers always enjoyed the break from the brown bag. They visited Vinnie's, Angie's, Pizza Hut, The Golden Arches, or Pepperoni Stick. Other favorite evening outings included Chesapeake Bay Seafood House, The Tender Y, and The Williamsburg Inn.

Arriving as a new student to Lake Braddock might have been frightening, but arriving as a new teacher was overwhelming. This year, due to the record number of students enrolled, 45 new teachers joined our lair, and according to Dr. Alwood, in the ten years that the school has been open, this has been the largest number of new teachers ever. During the first few weeks, the new staff members struggled to master the layout of the new school. One teacher even remarked that she brought her lunch to school the first week because she could not find the cafeteria. Many of the teachers commented that the size of the school made getting acquainted slower than elsewhere but soon thereafter most new arrivals settled down into the routine. Mrs. Rigsbee commented, "After I got to know my way around, learned the names of my 150 students, and the names of the other teachers in my subschool, I really began to feel right at home." By June, the once new teachers became quite adept at finding their way around the school and discovered that they really enjoyed teaching this year. Some even remarked on an interesting aspect of the large school, such as Cathy Alexander who said, "Due to the fact that so many pupils have lived in other parts of the nation and world, they have brought a wealth of 'first-hand' knowledge with them and it has been quite a learning experience for myself and my classes."

When asked if he was a crazy guy, Mr. Dale Rumberger responded, "This is true!" The intermediate drama and English instructer, as well as SGA sponsor, explained that the informality of his classes helped to break the ice between teacher and students. By using an accent and through telling stories, Mr. Rumberger tried to help those 7th and 8th graders who were under pressure to gain confidence in themselves. "The intermediate students are at a challenging age, and I enjoy helping to make positive changes in their attitudes and outlooks on life," remarked Mr. Rumberger. In late November, Mr. Rumberger was nominated for the teacher of the year award, and one SGA student, Trent Kubo, remarked, "He's the kind of teacher who will let you do things on your own and won't do everything for you." Mr. Rumberger commented,"My philosophy is that the only way students will learn is through experience, so I give them the opportunity to grow." He felt that school should not just be a place to learn the difference between nouns and verbs, but that the students should also grow emotionally through all experiences. Mr. Rumberger smiled "That's what my classes are all about!"

LIFE SAVERS

"1 and 2 and 3 and 4." those were sounds familiar to anyone who took Mr. Stein's ninth grade health class. In a nine week period students learned about basic first aid and CPR. A CPR card, or Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation Emergency Card was issued to any student who could identify 38 out of 50 items on a written test and pass the practical test. The written test included questions on material covered in class, while the practical test involved mouth to mouth resuscitation and chest compressions on a dummy. Students who took Mr. Stein's class left with a feeling that they had the capability of possibly saving someone in an emergency.

MENU

To most students, the cafeteria was just another place to eat; however, not many realized the amount of work that went into making the cafeteria a pleasant place for students and faculty. As a result of the many hard hours the cafeteria employees put in, the cafeteria received the 1983 Food Service Award. Cafeterias from four areas were judged on the quality of the food, the decorations, and the relationships among the cafeteria staff, the students and the faculty. Mary Keninitz. cafeteria manager, commented that she, as well as the rest of the staff were thrilled when they won the award."We were chosen from 166 schools; it made us very proud."

BEHIND THE COUNTER

During the '83-84 school year, Senior Barbara Kininitz was a familiar face working behind the counters during her lunch shift. To become a part of the school work program, Barbara responded to advertisements posted in the halls and arranged her schedule accordingly. Although working during school took up a lot of her time, there were definite advantages to in-school employment. Making $4.36 an hour gave her the extra income to have an active social life as well as a stable one. Responsibility also played an important role since Barbara's job was secured by the 1900 students and faculty eating in the cafeteria each day. Working in the cafeteria was a good learning experience for Barbara which prepared her for the real working world.

STOP?

That was a four letter word among the hard working custodians this year. With such a large school, the custodians had always had a big job, yet with the increase in students this year, their job became a little harder. For the thirty conscientious workers, the work never seemed to be done, as there were walls to be cleaned, floors to be swept, and windows to be washed. In addition, there were three shifts of these hard workers so that Lake Braddock was continuously cleaned. After school and night activities such as basketball games and dances added even more work. Although it was a never-ending job, the custodians were very happy in their jobs as Cathy Yates explained, "I love working around the kids, and that is all that counts."

Low,
I don't know where to begin! It's so hard trying to recapture the year and the value of friendship on a page. I had a great senior year and I'm glad you were a part of it! I wish we could have done even more together, but at least we have next year. U'va all the way! We can look back and remember all the excitement in Mr. Bergstrom's English class. (Yea! I should say all the naps we took.) I'll fondly recall panels and plays. Psssst. No, through it all I did have some fun. We got to sit + gossip for an hour.

I know that is an old line, but I really do appreciate your caring attitude towards others many times. You have made me feel important. Thanks for your support. I hope you have a great summer and lots of luck at U.Va. (It should be great) Thanks again for being a super friend! Love always,

For many seventh graders, coming to a new school was quite a different experience. When asked what they liked most about this year, their replies were:

"The cafeteria food is much better than in elementary school, and there are more people to make friends with,"stated Debbie Buser.

"There's a lot more freedom and more space to 'cruise' around before school. Also, there are more activities to get involved in,"added Greg Poquis.

BURST OF SPIRIT

Starting the year out with a "BANG!", the Class of '89 defeated the Class of '88 in a very close "scream your lungs out" pep rally. It was a chance for the seventh graders to show their school pride as they energetically chanted "Bruins! Bruins!" They were entertained by the award-winning Marching Band, and the Varsity, J. V., and freshman cheerleaders. It was a time for the class to unite as they cheered on the football teams and supported both their peers and their school. Overall, the Class of '89 followed in the footsteps of their elders and proved they were a class worth noticing.

BUSY BRUINS

From flower-making parties to electing the Homecoming Court, activities buzzed with excitement during Homecoming Week. Classes worked hard at making floats related to the week's theme, "A Sparkling New Decade," hoping they would win the float contest at Friday night's game. Also, other activities such as the Bonfire and Fall Follies pepped up the students for the Homecoming Game against Fort Hunt. The Homecoming Parade was also a successas people gathered to watch the award-winning Marching Band, Homecoming Court, and cheerleaders march along the Lake Braddock community. Overall, Homecoming Week was a chance to unite the student body and express Bruin pride.

"TOTALLY NEW EXPERIENCE"

Entering such a big school, many seventh graders experienced the excitement, fascination, and trauma of the first day. Halls were crowded as students searched for their classes while others gathered to talk about their summer activities. Faces of confusion, happiness, and laughter filled the halls. The shock of coming to such a big school somewhat settled as classes weré found, and the students realized that school had started again. As Shawn Little exclaimed,"Though I was nervous about entering Lake Braddock, I sensed that this year would be a totally new experience filled with activities galore!"

DANCE FEVER

Filled with toe-tapping music and an enthusiastic crowd, the intermediate dance, sponsored by the Class of '89, shone with smiling faces. This was the first dance the Class of '89 attended, and the turn-out was surprising. At first, many were shy and hesitated about dancing. However, by the end of the night, friends were found, and the dance buzzed with excitement from songs by such performers as David Bowie and Talking Heads. As Kenny Brooks exclaimed,"Music, friends, drinks, girls..... what else can you ask for?"

DECISIONS ?!

With a variety of electives to choose from, students had a chance to become involved in a class of their interest. For the person with an ear for music, such classes as chorus, band, and orchestra were offered to enhance their musical skills. Art was also offered for students interested in such activities as pottery, drawing, and painting. Also, drama was provided for the "ham" in the crowd; it gave a chance for the "future" actors and actresses a taste of performing on stage. In addition, such classes as home-economics and shop were available for students interested in sewing, cooking, woodcraft, and model making. Whatever the interests of the students, the electives added both enjoyment and education.

LEADING THE WAY

As the year progressed for the Class of '89, class officers were elected and more student participation was encouraged. With the help of sponsors Ann Jaekle and Bev Pollard, President Mike Rush, Vice-President Jenny Parker, Secretary Karen Karson, Treasurer Mike Maccaroni, and Historian Jay Stevens worked hard on providing more activities to unite the class and enhance school spirit. Such activities as Spirit Week, Field Day, and intermediate dances gave a chance for the students to express their pride and interest in their class. Overall, the hard work of the officers paid off as students found enjoyment as well as a way to get involved.

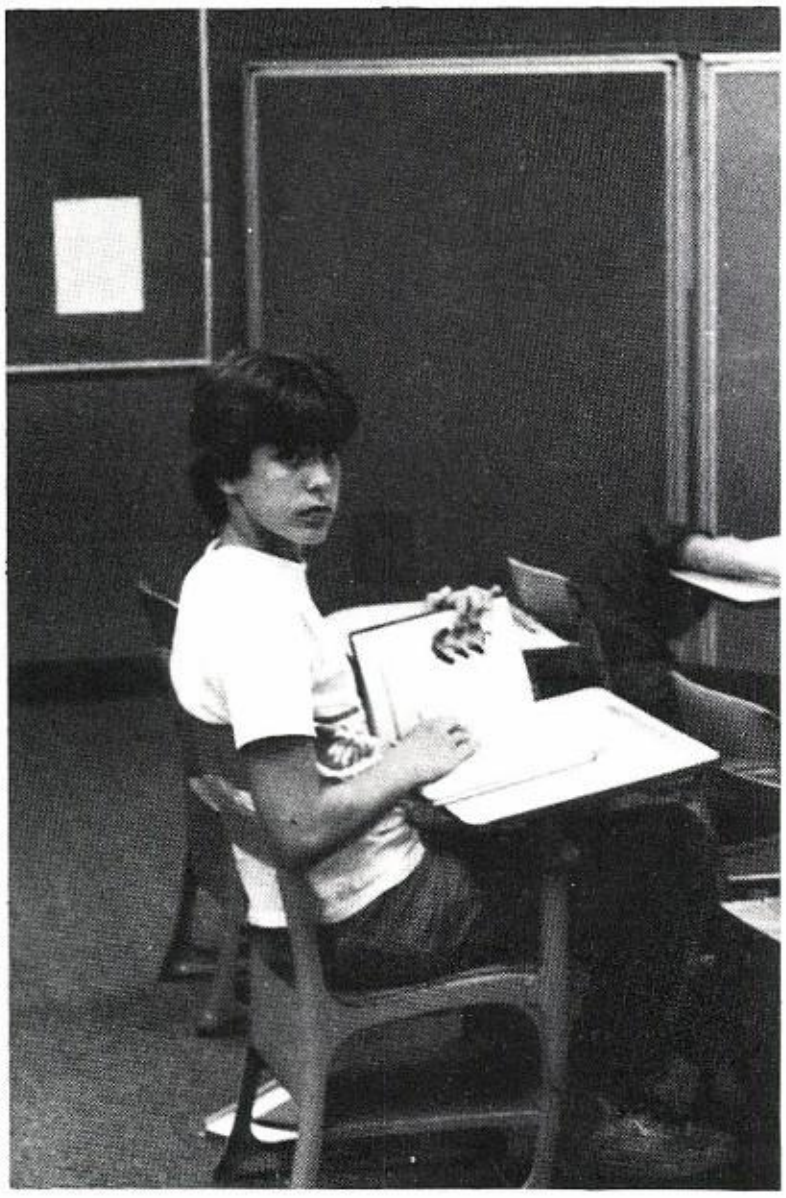
A NEW START

As the 1983-84 school year began, both old and new eighth graders gathered in their "home away from home," SubschoolII. For those who returned, the bright colors and friendly smiles were a familiar scene. Yet for the newcomers, there were plenty of shocking surprises that made their first day at Lake Braddock seem like an everlasting nightmare. The size of the school and the thousands of students attending were just to name a few. As the week progressed, the atmosphere changed to a more comfortable scene, and being an eighth grader was an experience most of them would never forget.



In Mrs. Mather's sixth period math class, Matt McFarlene skims through his new math book with high hopes for the year.

GROWING UP

Many responsibilities characterized the life of eighth graders as the Class of '88 began their final year as intermediates. Getting to class on time, being prepared with all the right materials, working quietly individually and in a group, and completing all assignments were just a few rules to follow. Eighth graders were given a chance to prove their maturity if these rules were obeyed. For example, in Mr. Magathan's social studies classes and Mrs. Gander's English classes "limit points" were given out as punishment. A limit point was received for chewing gum, being tardy, talking in class, being disruptive, and not coming to class prepared. After a certain amount of limit points were accumulated, detention was served after school. For most, being responsible was an easy task which resulted in gaining the respect the Class of '88 deserved.

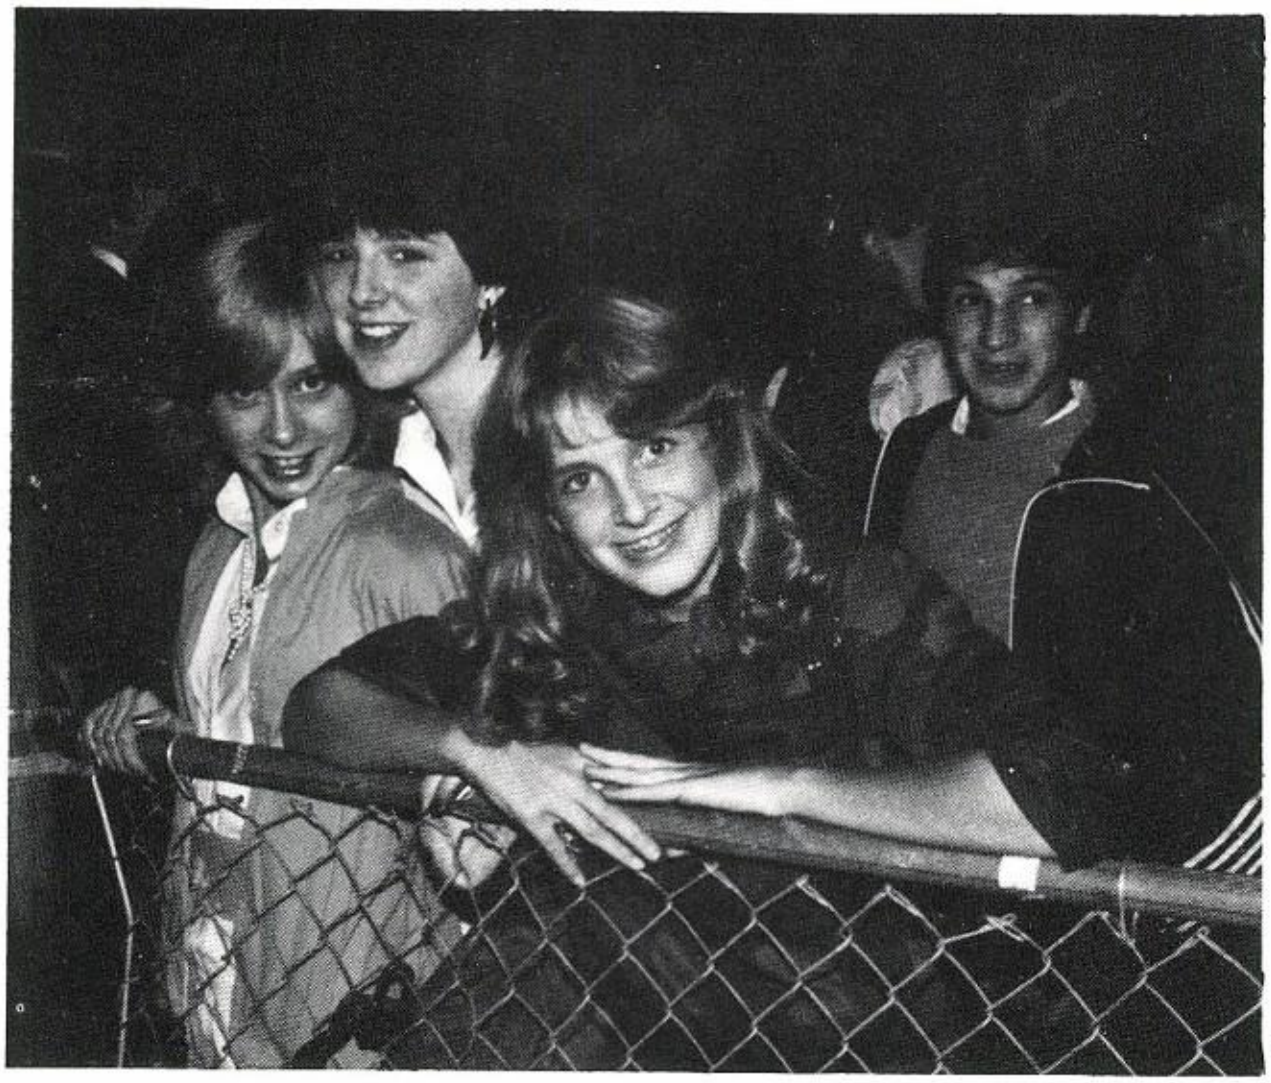
CELEBRATE

Homecoming Week brought excitement to the students attending Lake Braddock each year. Many activities occurred during this special week which enabled eighth graders to feel proud of being a part of the school. First, there was the Fall Festival in which the Class of '88 had a booth entitled, "Fish Bowl Pitch." Not only did throwing a ping-pong ball into a small bowl win the participant a fish, but also it provided the eighth grade treasury with a few extra dollars. Other events the Class of '88 took part in included the Fall Follies, the Bonfire, and the '83 float competition. All in all, Homecoming Week was action-packed and was celebrated in style.



Celebrating their last year as intermediates, Laurie Johnson, Rachael Burnes and Robyn Cruthers support the "Bruins" at the Homecoming game.

As the year progressed, being leaders for the Class of '88 wasn't an easy job for its officers, but it proved to be well worth all their time and effort. Under the leadership of Scott Hawley as president, Melissa White as vice president, Nina Williams as secretary, and Danny Lafond as treasurer, a well planned and successful year appeared to be a foregone conclusion. The class officers got along as one happy family working together to make all the decisions concerning the Class of '88. There were plenty of activities to keep the officers busy such as Homecoming Week, Fall Festival, Beautification Week, and the intermediate dances. With their joint effort the officers of the Class of '88 made an exciting, enjoyable, and profitable year for their fellow classmates.

DANCE FEVER

Brilliant sound and fantastic lighting added a special touch to the first intermediate dance of the year. Eighth graders felt privileged to be the sponsors of such a successful extravaganza. Unlike the high school dances, a dress code was enforced — NO JEANS! Inside the cafeteria, many popular songs were chanted such as "Beat It," "Let's Dance," and "Safety Dance." Even a few oldies but goodies were played like "Stairway to Heaven," "Freebird," and "Whip It." Bringing in a majority of both the seventh and eighth graders, the first intermediate dance was concluded as the "main event" for the first quarter.

CHANGE OF SEASONS

As the last of the cold wintry days disappeared, eighth graders participated in a new variety of after school activities. Warmer weather lead to such outdoor sports as soccer, basketball, football, and baseball. The warmth of the sunshine brought many of the students out of their homes and into parks with their friends and families. Many rode bikes along trails, took walks, and just enjoyed being outdoors. Homework and other supposed priorities were set aside as the winter season ended, and the spring season began.

GOING ON

As the '83-'84 year came to an end, eighth graders were excited about their next step up the educational ladder. To be a freshmen was an honor that most were ready to achieve although there were a few that felt they weren't ready for the change. Harder schedules, more responsibilities, and longer homework assignments were just a few of the "extras" new freshmen had to encounter. Looking forward to next year, eighth graders cheerfully said good- bye to Subschool 2 and hello to Subschool 3.

FRESH START

As the 8:15 a.m. bell rang on August 29, 782 new freshmen entered the halls of Lake Braddock. This year proved to be a very exciting one...full of new challenges and experiences. Academics created more pressure and were more challenging than they had been previously, because now the grades REALLY counted! With a wider variety of classes to choose from, the freshman gained a new perspective on class scheduling. School wasn't all bad though; there were plenty of new social activities to help ease the pressure of academics. Now that they were in high school, the freshmen were also allowed to participate in dances, clubs, and sports. When asked what he was looking forward to most about his freshman year, Rob Goldsmith answered,"the end!" Maybe so, but when the end of the year rolled around, the freshmen had accumulated friendships and memories that would be treasured forever.

SHOUT!

"Shout" by Otis Day and the Nights was probably one of the most popular songs played at the many dances held for grades 9-12 this year. For the intermediates there had only been 4 dances a year, so the freshmen looked forward to having them more frequently. After a long, hectic week at school, dances were a welcome chance to meet new people, visit with friends, and just relax. The music at the soc-hops was usually done by Sound-Tech. At the big dances such as the Sadie Hawkins, a band was hired. A wide variety of songs were played including soul, such as Michael Jackson's "Billie Jean"; new wave, such as "Should I Stay or Should I Go?" by The Clash; oldies, like "Shout"; and various slow dances. When asked what he thought of the dances, Jay Boyd answered,"I liked them because that's the best way to meet a lot of new people."

(long, you never know) I want to really get to know you. That's my way of saying "Please keep in touch." For now, how about a toast, "To one of the most inteligent, descent, charming, intriguing, fascinating, and beautiful women in the world! Lori, if you remember only one thing in life, remember me too. Love always (really) (YAMAMOTO) L.B. '84 Princeton '88 P.S. God, you have awesome ankles!!!

LOCK UP

With so many new students enrolled in Lake Braddock this year, locker distribution proved to be a problem. To solve the yearly problem of returning emergency care cards, lockers were only issued to students with their emergency care cards. Still, there were quite a few more students than lockers, so students were encouraged to find a partner to share lockers. Walking down the hall, people saw various ways to decorate their lockers to become their "home away from home." Carpet, wallpaper, shelves, posters, mirrors, and even radios were installed to make for a more comfortable atmosphere. After all, who wanted to open an ugly, orange, metal locker six times a day?

FOLLIES

The theme of this year's Fall Follies was "sparkling new decade." The freshman class organized themselves and put together their skit. Their opening scene featured Colleen Sullivan explaining that she was trying to decide which Northern Virginia high school she should attend. She had narrowed down her choices to Robinson, Fort Hunt, and Lake Braddock. She then observed the sports, faculty, and spirit in each school. Lake Braddock won in all three categories. Although the skit did not place, it was very well organized, was full of enthusiasm, and showed that the new freshmen were, indeed, taking an active role in the activities of high school.

PICTURE PERFECT

As Homecoming rolled around, the talk started turning to who would represent the freshman class on the Homecoming Court. During second period one morning, slips of paper were passed around in the freshman classes, and the students voted for the two girls they would most like to see on the Homecoming Court. A week before the game, the names of Paige Geiger and Chris Rives were announced over the loudspeaker. This was quite an honor for Paige and Chris to be picked out of all the hundreds of freshman girls. During half time of the Homecoming game, the two were escorted onto the field by Mr. Ron Geiger and alumni Chip Rives. Later they were driven around the field on a Pontiac Trans Am T-top. That was a night Paige and Chris will never forget.

LEADERS

The Class of '87 had two sponsors this year. Without the leadership of Mr. David Greek and Ms. Barbara Wilson, the class would not have been able to survive the required activities. Some of the sponsors' jobs included finding a flatbed for the Homecoming float, finding students to participate in the Fall Follies and Fall Festival, organizing the class council, and arranging chaperons for the dances. According to Mr. Greek, the first six weeks were tremendously hectic, after that the class ran smoothly. Any advice to future sponsors?-"Do it for more than one year. The first year you make all the mistakes; the second year, you know what you're doing."

HEAD-WORK

Academic subjects were put into a new perspective as the freshman began their high school years. Some of it was fun. The students had more to say about what classes they took. Foreign languages, home economics, industrial arts, and other electives became available to the freshmen. This meant they could actually take a class they enjoyed! It was not all "a bed of roses," though. Classes became a lot more difficult and seemed to require endless time and effort. As Freshmen Stephan Russell sais, "Classes are a lot harder, and it takes more work to get an A than it did in eighth grade."

TRAINING

As fall rolled around again, conversations turned to football. Varsity and JV Football games were not the only opportunities for spectators to watch their favorite sport. Freshman Football was also offered in most Fairfax County schools. The Freshman Football team at Lake Braddock worked very hard and finished off the season with a 3-3 record. Although this record was not outstanding, the chance to play Freshman Football gave many freshmen their first taste of high school sports. Many hours of work, pain, and exhaustion went along with the sport. It was a valuable experience, and as Freshman Football player Robbie Carraway commented at the end of the season,"It was a lot of work and very time consuming, but it was worth it."

OUT TO LUNCH

Lunchtime was the one substantial break students received during the school day. It lasted 35 minutes and students spent much of that time waiting in line or trying to find a seat. A freshman student always found a friend or two interspersed among the mob of people clamoring to eat. Many freshmen congregated at a certain table where they discussed with their friends the trials and joys of the day. The wide variety of food made lunchtime very satisfying to students' stomachs and morale.

The last week of the 1984 school year filled freshmen students with mixed emotions. They approached each class with tense and knotted stomachs, knowing they would have to recall all they learned throughout the entire school year for the approaching final exams. The freshmen were also filled with excited anticipation for the summer and nostalgia for the past year. Their freshman year was a memorable one. It had held many new friendships and experiences. This year would be fondly remembered forever.

CRUISIN'

Driving! What a concept! A way to get from point A to point B. For sophomores, usually by a longer more interesting route than travelled by their parents. When asked what the best thing about being a sophomore was, "Driving,"a group of sophomores enthusiastically answered. When asked what the best thing about driving will be, David Richard answered, "Cruising... Everywhere!" Another sophomore, Anne Cirrilo, was looking forward to getting a license so a job would be more attainable. On the other hand, Kathy Layton was looking forward to having dates other than her parents. Insurance and gas money! What a cost! These were two of the disadvantages of driving that were soon discovered by the Class of '86.

SOPHOMORE

Spir-it: a particular mood or emotional state characterized by vigor and animation. The class of '86 started off a new decade of Lake Braddock's existence with renewed spirit and enthusiasm. With one year of high school behind them, graduation suddenly became a more attainable goal for sophomores. "There has been more participation this year from the class than any other year so far," said '86 President Maria Cademartori. A meeting was held where the class officers Kathy Moore, secretary; Audra Massey, treasure; Kim Carathers, vice-president; Maria Cademartori, president; and the sponsors, Mr. Ferguson and Mrs. Baney discussed Homecoming Week, the two dances (held on October 14 and March 9) and other fund raising events. The enthusiasm expressed in the beginning carried throughout their sophomore year.

CHANGES

Still sitting in the same style desks that they had been sitting in for all of their Lake Braddock years, sophomores noticed something different. The work got harder. There were concepts to consider, proofs to be proven, and tough tests to be taken. But along with the increased workload came a greater variety of classes from which to choose. Appearing on all sophomore's schedules were English and P.E. along with the excitement of driver's ed. Geometry was a part of most sophomores' daily routine along with biology. Chemistry and Algebra II or Algebra II-trig. were available for students getting ahead in their academic careers. On their way to becoming bi-lingual, many students found themselves in a second or third year of a foreign language. French and Spanish were the most popular choices. Electives ranged from typing to auto-mechanics, giving sophomores a chance to pursue something of their personal interest.

NO PAIN NO GAIN

Chris Ferraiuolo
Chris Ferrantino
Jay Fineberg

Do we have to dress out?" "It's raining outside!" "Somebody stole my gymsuit...again." Familiar quotes like these filled the locker rooms during the sophomores' last reguired year of P.E. Since they were the "reigning class" they had first choice in the variety of activities offered to them. Sophomores looked forward to the end of P.E., but dreaded it at the same time. For most sophomores, P.E. would be replaced the following year with an academic course. Having to change into the same sweaty clothes every day would not be missed, but the enjoyment of competition and exercise would.

HUNT & PECK

A-S-D-F, J-K-L-;was the 'home row' that sophomores who took Typing I became familiar with and would know the rest of their lives. Generally, sophomores started out typing at a rate of ten words a minute. Then gradually worked up their G.W.A.M. (gross words a minute) to forty or more. But speed was not the only thing that sophomores taking Typing I were concerned with; they also had to learn how to type formal business letters, research papers, and footnotes. Typing I was found to be a very worthwhile course for sophomores because it would help in the future in any career.

D.A.I. BLUES

Not quite knowing what to expect, sophomores encountered their first experience with standardardized testing, D.A.T.'s. (Differential Aptitude Tests). In early November, sophomores suffered through two hours of testing on two consecutive days. The tests measured students' abilities and matched them with their career interests. After receiving their results in January, some sophomores had a better idea of what their skills were and what type of education was needed to enter a career involving those skills.

Yes-contrary to popular belief there was life after 2:30 p.m. Although the class of '86 found the academics of their sophomore year harder, they also found many ways to occupy their free time. Some spirited students were involved in class council or school oriented sports, while others found it more relaxing to go home and watch soap operas such as 'General Hospital.' A wide variety of clubs and organizations provided activities for students of all interests. Then there were those who preferred to just kick back and 'gel out' while listening to the latest tunes. The working life even found its way into some sophomores' lives. Whether it was a sport, a club, a job, or just 'gelling out' at home, the class of '86 made good use of the free time they had.

GEOMETRY

Those sophomores who took geometry spent many hours agonizing over dreaded proofs. They were taught how to calculate diameters, radii, and degrees for triangles, squares, and circles, as well as combinations of these basic shapes. Also included in the curriculum was the construction of parallelograms, trapezoids, and the 'gons, such as hexa, penta, and deca. There were a wide variety of reactions to geometry. The following were some of them. "It's easy."-Pam Mahoney. "It's confusing."-Cindy Downing. "It's challenging."-David Moyer. "It's boring."-Trupti Patel.

With a frustrated facial expression, Marti Bevan diligently tries to prove the congruency of two triangles.

BIOLOGY

Biology: The science of life and life processes.

Above is the Webster dictionary definition of the word biology. However, below are some first-hand definitions stated by a few classmates:

Chris Black: Biology is my favorite class because it gives me the opportunity to learn. ZUT!

Becky Edwards: It's the meaning of life.

Pam Mahoney: One thing no one ever mentions in the study of biology is that "there is no such thing as a dumb blond."

Kent Kalvaitis: It's enjoyably complex.

Terri Marcoux: You learn where life comes from and the structures of cells. It's a really interesting subject if you put something into it.

Kim Broach: I really thought the Human Life study was interesting. It answered questions I never had the nerve to ask!

LOOKING AHEAD

After surviving ten years of school, the members of the class of '86 were looking ahead. They were anticipating the privileges that accompanied becoming upperclassmen, as well as dreading the responsibilities. As juniors they would be taking more advanced classes in order to prepare them for college and their careers. This would unfortunately mean the homework load would increase. But the year would not be wasted on homework alone, since most students were allowed to use the car more often and their curfews were extended. Despite the responsibilities that accompanied becoming a junior, most sophomores optimistically anticipated the coming year.

During class Jay Duhadway wonders what next year and his future will hol in store.

When asked how he felt about becoming a junior, Craig Alden expressed his enthusiasm with a smile.

Heyyyy my bear, dammit, we are finally outa here dammit. I'm passing too many finals. I want to thank you so much for all the help you have given me with Jerks, weekends, and Spanish. You and me definitely have to go out soon, maney double with some fellas, huh? That would be too cool for school. Maney someone will ask us to watch their house, and we can stay so all week long. Sometimes I wanna skip the whole summer and go do college now to escape the jerks and the cut-ters all at the same time (kill 2 birds with one stone) I can't believe we both actually have prom dates, how many hours did we spend worrying about that? This summer you & me have do go out and show some more fellas how do party, dammit! Strip ~~to~~ quarters anyone? No? Why not? Afraid that we're too good? Your Right. Lori & Kathy are on another Roll. Congrats on UVA and do it up! We definitely have to visit each other in school. Thanks for being such a good friend

Love always,

Kath

RISING

Ready and roaring to go... the Class of '85 started the new school year. The juniors began their year with a major change with relocation in Subschools V and VI where they would spend their two remaining years of high school. This new location brought much confusion in finding classes, meeting friends, and sharing the space with seniors. In addition, the new location gave the class a feeling of importance; they were finally one of the two top powers in the school. Keeping the feeling strong, they sailed through Homecoming, ordered their class rings, took PSAT's, SAT's, and final exams, and examined possibilities of college. Even though the pace they set was fast, together the Class of '85 kept up the spirit and enthusiasm throughout their junior year.

HIGH SPIRITS

As the excitement of the first few weeks of school finally began to wear off, another event raised the spirits of the junior class. Homecomeing Week was upon Lake Braddock once again. Monday's pep rally started the week, and the junior class proved that they had the strongest vocal cords by winning the spirit competition. On Wednesday the juniors participated in the Fall Follies with their skit "We Sparkle with Pride," along with skits from other clubs, classes, and organizations. Thursday's bonfire was just perfect for snuggling with that special someone and sipping cider from the Class of '85's cider sale. Then during the Homecomeing Game, the float was paraded around the the track along with spirited class members. Finally, Saturday came bringing with it a memorable evening at the Homecoming Dance. After such an eventful week, the Class of '85 once again awaited another event to put them in high spirits.

BOOGIE DOWN

What would be a good way to celebrate the end of the first quarter and at the same time earn money for the class treasury? When faced with this question, the Class of '85 officers chose to have a Soc-Hop. The music for the festive evening was furnished by Sound Tech. A blend of new wave, rock, and funk encouraged students to get on their feet and boogie. If one was overcome with an incredible thirst, the Debate Club sold cokes for a minimal fee. Many felt the Class of '85's dance was a great way to end the first quarter and an even better way to start the new one.

Concerned faces filled the main halls on the moring of October 22nd. Another run-of-the-mill school day? No, it was PSAT Saturday, and those concerned looks were for the 115 questions that would soon be plaguing the innermost crevices of the brains of hundreds of juniors. Trying to concentrate in the cafeteria where temperatures doubtfully exceeded 37 degrees was difficult enough, without taking into consideration that many of the candidates had less than the usual eight hours of sleep the night before. Although the PSAT's were not a long awaited event, they would better prepare the juniors for the many criticaly important tests that they would face in the future.

WRAPPED AROUND YOUR FINGER

One of the most exciting events occurring in the Class of '85's junior year was ordering class rings. Brochures were passed out during the English classes, and for the next two weeks the main topic of conversation was, "Which ring are you getting?" Deciding on the stone color or cut to order was difficult, but when the choice was made, the rings were ordered with much anticipation of the ring breakfast in May.

As Patricia Ham explains her desired ring style, a Jostens representative processes her order.

WEEKEND RAGE

Becoming a junior was almost like being promoted from a lieutenant colonel to a full colonel. Hard work and new responsibilities were put upon the junior class, and right along with the work came all of the good times. Growing up meant looking ahead and starting to think about the future; which college to attend, SAT's, college applications, and keeping grades up, all at the same time. Life was frustrating at times, but the weekends made it a little easier to cope. It really didn't matter where the students went, whether it was a party, a movie, or just cruising around, anything to get out of the house. The good times spent with friends would not be soon forgotten as the Class of '85 looked forward to the day when they would rule the school.

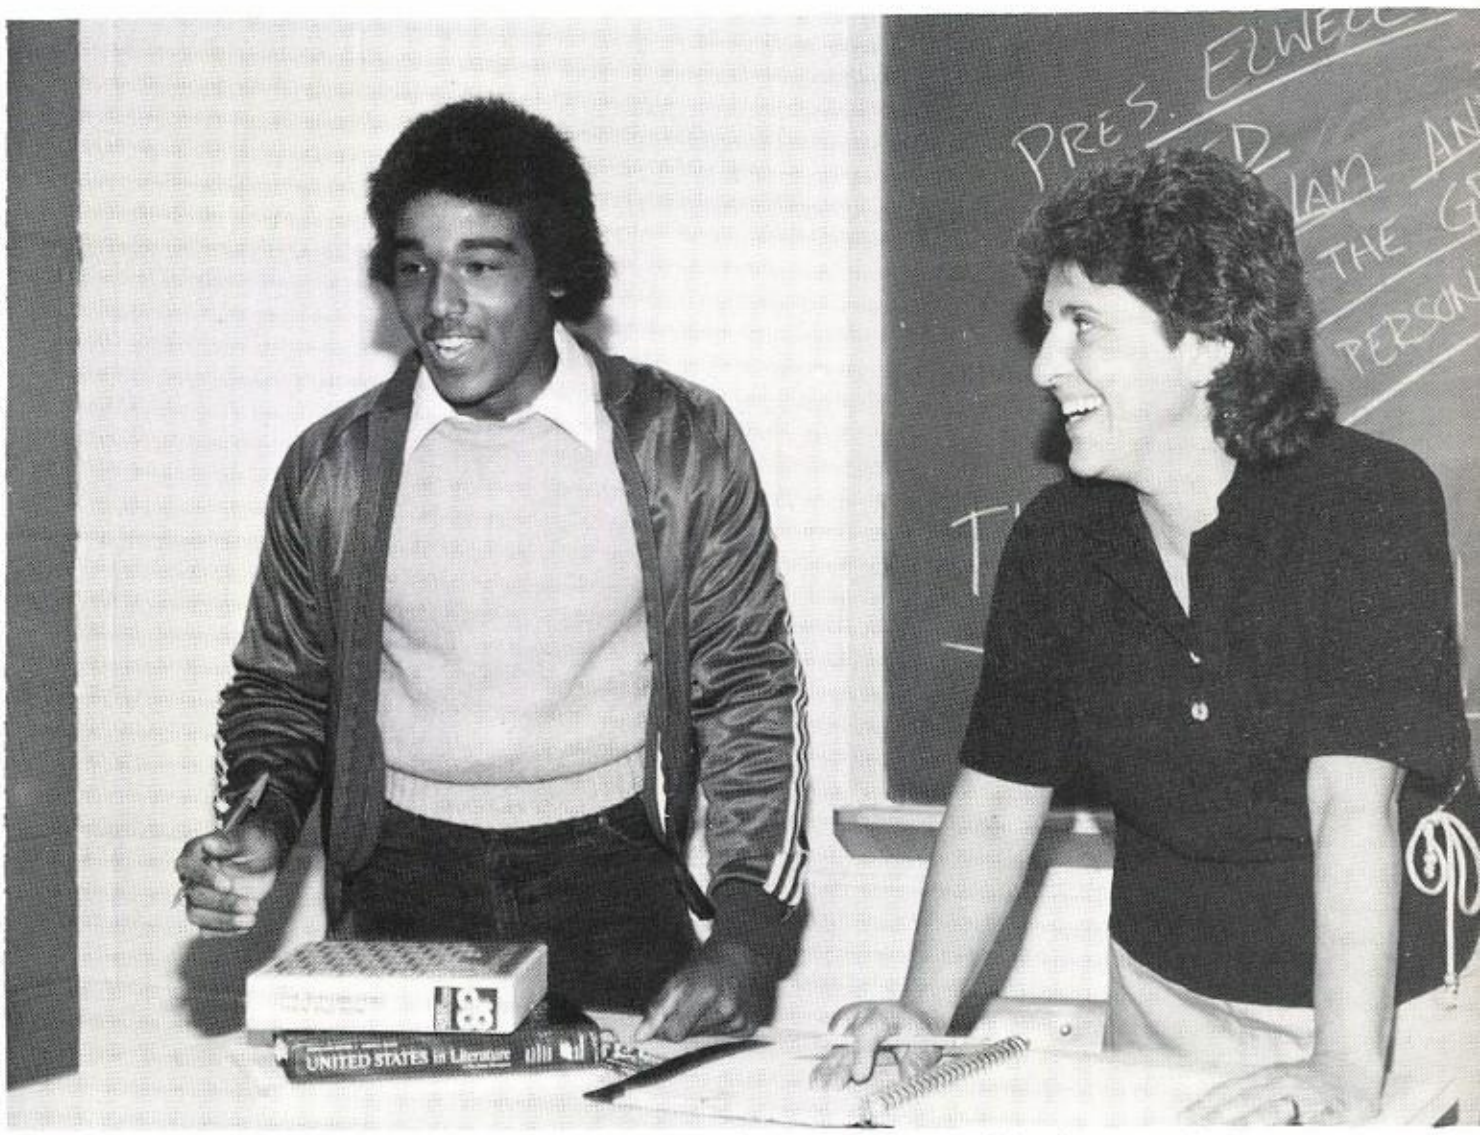
WORK FORCE

For juniors, a job meant busy weekends and week-nights. Most juniors enjoyed their jobs, whether they involved serving hungry customers at Roy Rogers', lifeguarding at a local pool, or working at a clothing store. As well as providing feelings of independence and responsibility, a job also gave juniors a chance to meet new people. For some, a job was the ticket for earning money toward a college education, a car, or just to have some extra spending money. Since the jobs were only part-time, most students were still able to join extra-curricular activities and complete homework assignments.



While Mrs. Price awaits impending laughter, Kenny Brandon attempts to explain the reason for his tardiness.

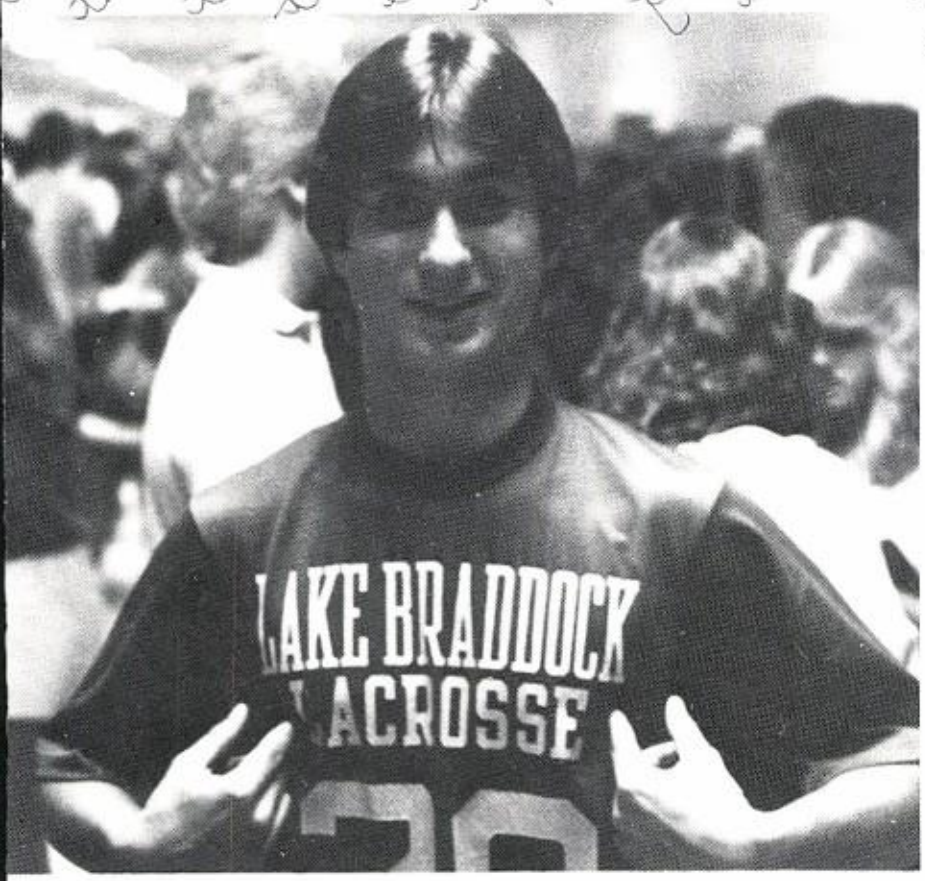
SENIOR STRUT

Strutting into school, ready to take their place, the seniors pushed their way down the main hall. They watched as the little kids ran from class to class afraid of being a minute late. Managing to find their way to class 10 minutes late, seniors claimed a temporary lapse of memory. After all, they had only been here five years. They found the halls somewhat more crowded but solved that problem easily enough by simply stepping over the little sevies and pushing aside the juniors and sophomores. A quick glance here and a quick glance there was enough to send underclassmen running. What a great feeling to finally be a senior!



opping in the hall between classes, Pete Stewart shows senior spirit.

DIGITAL DISPLAY

Before the sun had set on August 29, the Class of '84 had finished repainting the football press box. The previous purple "83" was transformed into a brilliant yellow "84." The traditional block numbers were changed to digital, adding a modern dimension to the school and class. In addition to the press box, the stairs leading to the football field were painted with the graduating class's number, and to continue the tradition, the home bleachers also displayed an "84." The devoted seniors, directed by Vince Santivicca, worked steadily despite the intense August heat. All in all, it was worth the sunburns, the splattered faces and the messy clothes to see the "84" come alive, thus a constant reminder to the seniors of their graduation on June 5.

TOUCH OF CLASS

Starting early in the spring of their junior year, the class of '84 officers were busy planning graduation activities, spirit days, and prom night. This hard work continued on into the summer with planning meetings taking place frequently. Treasurer Bobby Herting reflected, "We were running around madly before Homecoming, but hopefully it will pay off in the end with a senior year we all can remember." After much planning and heated debate, the '84 prom was scheduled for June 1 at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington and graduation followed on June 5. With the hard work of President Scott Hartung, Vice President Dani Schmidt, Secretary Lori Silinskie, Treasurer Bobby Herting, and Historian Mary Sowell, the class activities progressed with excitement and perfection.

SPLISH SPLASH

Two weeks prior to Homecoming, on September 24, the annual Fall Festival took place. The usual bland blacktop beside the school was a site of yelling, crafts, food, people, challenging games plus the"Senior Dunking Booth."The booth was run by seniors determined to make a few extra dollars toward prom costs. Bobby Herting organized the stand and captured some obnoxious seniors who manned the booth. Scott Brown was the first to go, followed by Matt Matsuda and David Kammerdeiner, who added a dazzle in his punk glasses. The best equipped for the wet job was Joey Phillips, who came all decked out in scuba attire, flippers included. The Class of '84 turned in exactly 84 dollars proving even in economics and in throwing a ball, they could "hit the mark."

SHOWDOWN

John Davis, fellow senior announced,"Let the show begin..." As part of the Homecoming festivities, the 11th annual Fall Follies debuted in the Little Theater. The theme,"A Sparkling New Decade" allowed the Senior Class to express what they felt would happen ten years from 1984. Bobby Herting wrote the script, and the main characters were enacted by the class officers. As the class gathered for their ten year anniversary, the officers reminisced their "Senior Year." As each idea was remembered, the other members portrayed the event--flowers for the float, the experience of a sevie, and the SAT's were a few. The increased participation by the seniors was a real boost for the entire class. Although not every senior could take part in the Fall Follies, many were in the audience cheering on the other seniors. The class of '84 took a prominent 3rd. They may not have won, but the mutual feelings of the class echoed,"The seniors are number one!"

LAST DANCE

As the Senior float made its victory lap around the stadium and Kathy Forgas was crowed queen, Homecoming activities reached the peak of excitement. After a week of spirit building, anticipating seniors looked forward to their final Homecoming dance with excitement. Activities started Monday with an assembly presenting the Bruin football team and Homecoming court. Representing the football team, captains Bill Link and Pete Ward boosted school enthusiasm for Friday night's game against Fort Hunt. Next, the court, represented by Debbie Dooley, Kathy Forgas, Jenny Jackson, Amy Patton, and Jenny Rowzie took their traditional stroll around the gym. The week progressed with Wednesday's Fall Follies and Thursday's successful bonfire. During the bonfire, seniors were awarded first place for their "dummy" designed by Molly O'Neil. The grand finale came on Saturday at the dance with the largest turn out in Lake Braddock's history.

LOFTY DREAMS

Some seniors arrived at school on November 5 and glided into the freezing lunchroom with lofty dreams of scoring 1600 on the S.A.T.'s. Most of them had taken every S.A.T. prep course offered. They had read every "How to Ace the S.A.T.'s" book ever published. Other seniors drifted into the cold cafeteria trying to survive the aftermath of Friday night. Their main goal that morning was to stay awake. Armed with number two pencils and admission tickets, students wandered around the school trying to find their assigned seats. They wore sweat pants and sweat shirts advertising names of their favorite colleges. Several teachers were seen throughout the morning, scrambling around the testing areas, handing out and collecting the answer sheets and test booklets. While some bored seniors designed unique artwork with the blackened ovals on their answer sheets, other seniors panicked when their brains became clogged with every mathematical formula they had ever learned. Although many different approaches to the test were taken, many seniors agreed that the S.A.T. was a time to relax and just try to do their best!

PICTURE THAT

Erik Hedegor

John B. Heffren

In flimsy velvet material of various colors worn over jeans, the Class of '84 was finally getting their first taste of being seniors; they were having their senior portraits taken. Students were scheduled in May of their junior year, but those who were unable to keep their appointments or who were new to the school were photographed early in the fall. Seniors were placed like mannequins in various poses by the photographers, and by the end of their session they had plastic smiles. All ended well and seniors were pleased with the outcome.

BUSINESS AS USUAL

The seniors had their first meeting early in October. Mrs. Spage and the class officers herded the rowdy bunch into the Little Theater in order to distribute some graduation information as well as to announce the Senior Superlatives. As the categories and winners were announced, applause and snickers of approval rippled through the audience. Then, after all official business had been either established or completed, the seniors moved to the back of the school for a class picture. Overall, the meeting and picture were a success. Both gave the class that special feeling of togetherness and 'seniorism' !

FIRST BLOOD

Starting a week before the annual Blood Drive, red paper blood drops were found pasted on the walls signaling that the drive was soon to begin. Seniors rushed to give blood for many reasons. One such reason was overheard from Alan Anderson, who said, "I gave to miss the big test." However, most seniors showed a genuine desire to help out; over 100 seniors and faculty donated blood. The donors were sent to health rooms to give their one pint of life-saving blood. Afterwards, they were given orange juice and cookies to rebuild their strength. All volunteers walked away feeling fine, and once again the senior class showed their commitment to help others.

SNACKS

In order to combat the afterschool munchies which seemed to attack the majority of Lake Braddock's population daily, dedicated seniors manned the Senior Snack Bar every day after school. Selling everything from Reese's Pieces to Mello Yello, the seniors provided students with munchies while raising money for their year's activities. Profits from the snack bar went toward the prom, graduation, and other senior year expenses. Pete Stewart and Joe Phillips, who helped run the snack bar, felt that it was a "very worthwhile institution." Over the years, the snack bar had become a part of senior life, somewhat of a tradition, and this year the tradition continued...successfully as ever.

WHAT, ME WORRY?

What is a woman to do? For Mrs. Spage this saying had much meaning, because she was in her third year as the senior class sponsor. Her responsibilities started during the spring of the junior year when she began planning for the prom with the '84 officers. One of the highlights of the prom was the sit-down dinner at the Shoreham hotel- a first for Lake Braddock. Mrs. Spage also had to coordinate the grand finale-graduation. Cap and gown order forms and getting names printed on diplomas were just a couple of the many graduation preparations that Mrs. Spage had to accomplish. Senior privileges such as the stage and snack bar, and activities such as switch day and class night were also overseen by Mrs. Spage. When asked about the pressures of her job, Mrs. Spage commented, "Usually, I sit and worry about not having enough money." However, Mrs. Spage pulled everything together with her hard work and dedication, and gave the Class of 1984 a year of fun and excitement that they would never forget.

REVERSED ROLES

After six years of teachers, the seniors had their chance to reverse roles. Seniors prepared a lesson plan and went headstrong into the classroom the next day. Before the switch, many seniors believed that teaching was a breeze, but after tackling a seventh grade class, the views differed. The seniors learned teaching required persistence, patience, an upper-hand, and a dedication to the students. Michele Salyer, who taught Mr. Magathan's eighth grade history class said, "Teaching was difficult; now I realize how obnoxious I was back then!" Senior switch proved once again to be both a learning and fun-filled experience.

TOTAL CHAOS

One morning in December, senior Sean Anderson was shot at the breakfast table by his own sister. That afternoon, Maria Nagy was being chased around the school parking lot by Matt Matsuda who was yelling, "I am your killer!" That night at the National Honor Society inductions, Kim Clark was killed by her best friend. All of these incidents were part of Chaos, a game played by many seniors. Disc guns and bulle called projectiles, were purchas from different toy stores in the ar All seniors playing Chaos received t name of another senior whom th were assigned to kill. Eventually, the were only two seniors left, and th played until there was a champi This game lasted for months. M seniors played Chaos to relieve str while others just played for the fun it!

GOODBYE

As we, the class of '84, graduated from our last year at Lake Braddock, the time came to reflect on the past and look ahead to the future. Graduation meant saying goodbye to friends and leaving pieces of our lives behind. Yet for everything left behind, there were at least ten times as many memories retained. It was hard to grasp the concept of finally being out of school; we were grown up, yet seventh grade seemed like just last year. It was equally hard to realize the many opportunities and responsibilities which lay ahead. College, careers , and even highschool reunions weren't as far away as they always had been. We will always have a special place in our hearts for Lake Braddock and our highschool memories such as first days of school, Homecomings, Driver's Ed., class rings, prom, graduation, and everything else we had participated in with our fellow classmates. Memories of the people we have encountered will linger as well. Being the close class we were, not many students or teachers will soon be forgotten. Yes, the senior class had a wonderful six years. Ironically, it was one of the most difficult and most wonderful things we had ever done to graduate and say goodbye. Regardless of the sadness though, there were always fantastic memories and always will be...goodbye, Lake Braddock.

FATED

What does the future hold in store for the class of 1984? Without a doubt, this question has entered the minds of every senior and has resulted in endless hours of wondering and daydreaming. Here are a few speculations of what the future could hold for some of the '84 seniors:

Joe Phillips will be the top paid male model of G.Q.

Jocelyn Olsen will weigh 350 lbs. and be doomed to endless Richard Simmons seminars.

Larry Bedsole will be the author of the "new, revised" edition of Webster's.

Andrew Frie, Matt Matsuda, & Rob Ward will be secret agents in charge of maneuvers for the Department of Defense.

Garrett Deckel will marry Mr. McQuade.

Kim Rice & Mike Elsberg will lose their arms and develop the art of 'spit painting'.

Jeff Guynn & Chip Kosciełniak will grow together at the arm, thus becoming siamese twins.

Jill Sexton, Marianne Helms, & Maureen Sullivan will live at "WINSTON'S" and make their living by begging on M Street.

Pete Ward will become the Calvin Klein underwear model.

Caroline Williams & Vince Santavicca will become totally apathetic and disassociate themselves from society.

Pete Stewart will become a recluse, develop and inferiority complex, and never get near a woman.

Nopadon Woods will become a hardened criminal after being fired from the L.B. Rat Patrol.

Jocelyn Kelly & Kathy Staudenmeyer will become counselors for AA.

Jeff Ridley will establish a rehabilitation program for juvenile delinquents.

Jo Hill will become mute.

Fired Up

As Lake Braddock students spent their last days of vacation relaxing, the Varsity Football Team spent five days at Juniata College in Hunington, Pennsylvania. The team's vigorous schedule included three practices a day to prepare for the '83 season. The first game opened the season with a defeat for the spirited Bruins at the hands of the Annandale Atoms. However, this did not curtail them; the Bruins came back to prove their superiority as they crushed Groveton, 25-8. Many times throughout the rest of the season, the Varsity Football Team came very close to winning their games. Jeff Buser (84) attributed this to the fact that the team lacked consistency in execution. This was obvious at the Jefferson game when the team was ahead 21-0 during the third quarter but somehow lost, 28-29. Despite the loss, the team remained "fired up" against Langley and proved their offensive attributes with an impressive score of 48-3. The team went into the game feeling "overwhelmingly confident" said team captain Pete Ward (77). Although the Homecoming game ended with a 13-14 loss, the team played tough throughout the entire confrontation. During the third quarter, the Bruins led 13-0, but unfortunately Bill Link (34), team captain, dislocated his shoulder and was forced to leave the game. This accident caused him to be out the rest of the season. Because the team was unable to get its running game going, it was forced to pass the majority of the time. However, Bill Link (34) left the Fort Hunt game only after gaining over 100 yards. Nothing could compare with the Bruins defeat of their arch rivals, the West Springfield Spartans. The Spartans fell beneath the deadly Bruin clutch by 16-8. The season ended with a defensive pinnacle for the team. They shut-out Oakton and left the field still "fired up." David Guy (80) commented that the Bruins, not only the players but coaching staff also, were "of quality I have never seen in any other school."

John Elliot (88), who doubled as split end, practices to uphold his reputation as a dependable kicker in clutch situations.

At Football Camp Tim Byrnes (57) and Ken Brandon (20) discuss various plays to be utilized during the '83 season.

Honoraries

Although Coach Joe Clark stressed the meaning of being a team man, there were several outstanding players on the Varsity Football Team that were honored for their athletic ability. Weekly, the players voted on their teammates who contributed the most during each game. The selected players became "The Players of the Week" and were honored during their week in the limelight. To distinguish them, the Varsity Cheerleaders decorated the athletes' lockers and posted their names in the main hall near the gymnasium. After the football season came to a close, each players' statistics were submitted to the All Northern District where six coaches voted, including Coach Clark. Several Bruins were All District, even two juniors, but only one Bruin became All Region, Jeff Hunter (70). These few players were commended for their talents by having their pictures and accomplishments publicized in the Bear Facts. Finally, Superlatives were chosen by the team to include the entire season, and the players were awarded trophies at the Fall Sports Banquet. It's these honorary Bruins that made the Lake Braddock Athletic Department one of the toughest contenders in the Northern District.

What it Takes

The 1983 Lake Braddock Freshman Football Team had an excellent season by finishing with a record of 3-3. Captains Marc Luce (24) and Tim Rascoll (14) led the team through a grueling practice everyday after school. These practices helped form an outstanding team, and the team, "showed a lot to me. They showed that they have what it takes to come back from two tough losses and win three straight. They are good competitors in the Northern District." Following the season, the traditional selecting of superlatives took place. Those recognized were safety Robbie Carraway (26) as the Best Defensive Player, Bobby Cole as the Most Improved Player, running backs Chuck Anderson (30) as the Best Offensive Player, and Cisco Jeter (33) as the Most Valuable Player. Starting quarterback Tim Rascoll (14) said that the team was "very successful, but we would have been nowhere without our coaches. Everyone should look for next year's J.V. Team and District Finals." Some offensive standouts were guard Brian Anderson (72) and wide receiver Mike Christian (22). On the defense, some outstanding players were linebackers David Cerra (57) and Rick Fetgatter (63), and defensive lineman Rob McFarland (55). With the help of Coach Fraser and his coaching staff, the 1983 Freshman Football Team proved that they have "what it takes."

Attempting a sack, Rob McFarland (55) takes down the quarterback just as he gets the ball off.

After a fumble, Mike Christian (22) assists the tackle of a West Springfield player.

Following a tough defensive struggle, David Cerra (57) James McClellan (77) and Rich Hooten (54) run off the field.

Spirited Competitors

This year's Varsity Cheerleading Squad was extremely active in adding to the pageantry of the football games and other school activities. Their practices throughout August consisted of hard work, but all the effort paid off early in the season when the girls competed at George Mason University. The squad placed first overall out of twelve other squads after winning every evaluation. In trying to achieve further perfection, they practiced twice a week for two hours each session. Their dedication to superiority was proven at the Regional Cheerleading Competition at the University of Maryland. They captured second place, out of twenty teams from Maryland and Virginia, thus qualifying them for the national competition in Dallas, Texas. In addition to competitions, the team sponsored football players of the week. With money from their own treasury, they decorated each celebrated athletes' locker to add pep to the team's morale.

Seniors Libby Smith and Alicia Terry, along with the Bruin Bears (Rick Frazier and Blair Marshall), are caught up in the winning spirit as Groveton is defeated by Lake Braddock.

Boosters

"Excellent," is the word Dani Schmidt used to describe this year's Varsity Winter Cheerleaders.That description does not come without reason. As one of Lake Braddock's most dedicated, school supporting spirit building groups, the Varsity Cheerleading Squad works extremely hard two 2 hour practices a week to uphold their reputation of being one of the best squads in the area. The winter cheerleaders are divided into two groups which alternate cheering for Boys and Girls Varsity Basketball and Varsity Wrestling. This year the squad added some new projects to their traditional spirit boasting list. For instance, they had enlarged pictures made of the Boys Basketball Team and hung them in the gym. Another new concept in the Varsity program is the addition of three sophomores to the squad. The cheerleaders continue their traditional spirit building activities such as decorating the locker rooms as well as the players' lockers and posting bright, peppy signs encouraging attendance at the games. Commenting on the squad's spirit program, captain Jenny Rowzie stated, "We're trying to get the school more interested in the team, the players, and what goes on during the season."

During a time out, Kristin Visscher, Dani Schmidt, Mike Swain, and Sam Fisk run on to the court executing superior jumps as Lake Braddock beats West Springfield.

Thick and Thin

"Excellent, great, the best in years!" described the 1983 Fall and Winter J.V. Cheerleaders by sponsor Kay Mikula. The cheerleaders chosen suppported the Bruins through "thick and thin." The squads not only went to the games, but also decorated the athletes' lockers. The sponsors, Kay Mikula and Jan Hilten, "Worked hard to help us improve our stunts and overall appearance. We appreciated the time they spent supporting us," as commented by Karen Tarlano and Ann Rafferty. Together Kelly Cavender and Ann Rafferty formed the two captains for the outstanding Fall Squad. The captains for winter were Kim Buskirk, and Lori Popovich, with Noel LaFontaine, and Kathy Moore as their co-captains. Overall, they cheered the Bruins through "thick and thin."

Cheering Up

Freshman Cheerleaders Kristin Ellsworth, Kathy Kalvaitis, and Carolyn Tempel execute the defensive cheer at the home game against Woodson.

Enthusiastically Kristen Yriondo, Michelle Sedar, Jennifer Steele, Monica Mazza, Julie Jones, and Tondra Bray perform a pyramid cheer to psyche the Bruins on for a victory over Lee.

"They're the best squad of Freshmen Cheerleaders in the Northern District. They did a really good job for freshmen," commented Kay Mikula, Freshmen Cheerleading Sponsor. Practicing for two hours on Mondays and Wednesdays prepared the group to perform at all of the Freshmen Football and Basketball games. The cheerleaders made locker stickers for all Freshmen Football players before their games. Along with the Junior Varsity Cheerleaders, they sold programs at all of the home Varsity Football games. Paige Geiger, captain of the cheerleading squad, commented "All of the cheerleaders worked very hard and did a good job."

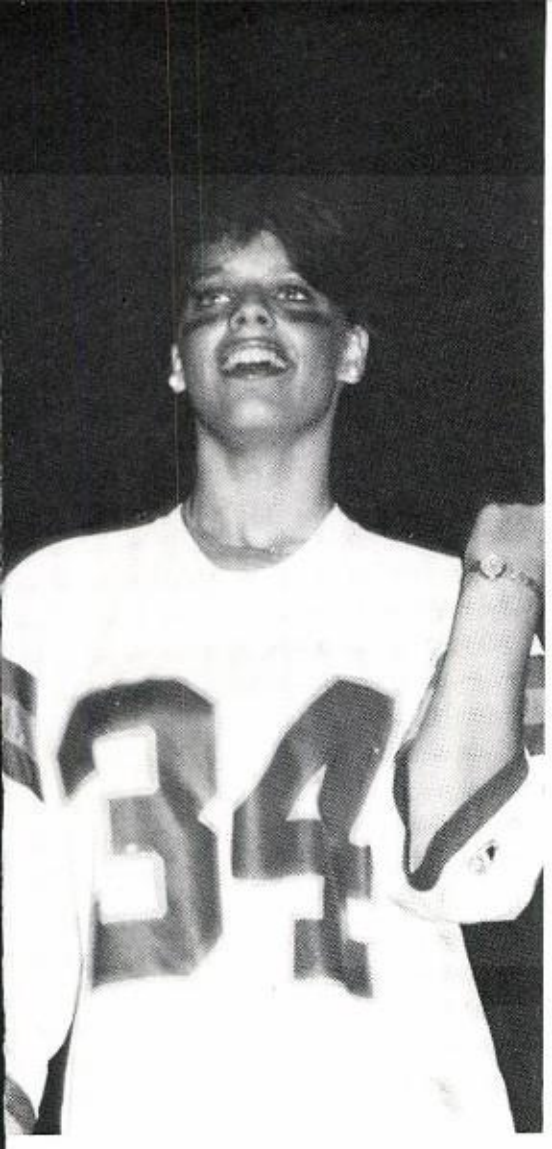
We Are Family



In only its second year, the Varsity Drill Team became a Lake Braddock tradition. With their overwhelming enthusiasum and brightly colored uniforms, the girls contributed to every event at which they performed. Leading the talented group were captain Jenny Clapper and co-captains Kortni Buck and Kathy Hassett. These girls practiced over six hours per week to prepare for their performances. "Drill team is really fun. All the girls are just like family," commented Jenny Clapper. Throughout the year, the Varsity Drill Team showed their dedication and unity.

As part of a skit in the Fall Follies held during Homecoming week, Ursula Reimer performs in a spoof about the football team with the rest of the Varsity Drill Team.

Lori,
This seemed to be the perfect page to sign on! What can I say. We have had our ups and downs but I am so glad we remained friends. I enjoyed the two years on drill team with you and as much as I hate to say it I think I am going to miss being a part of it next year. Never forget all the fun times in Rudy's A.P. Biology class - what fun times? If you ask me it was a waste of time. Take care of yourself. I know you will go far in life!
Love,
Shera

Winning Districts

Fourteen returning members made this year's Varsity Field Hockey Team one of the most experienced teams in the Northern District. The girls proved how much skill and expertise they had acquired in the field hockey program by finishing the regular season with a 7-3 district record, thus giving them a second place seat in the Northern District Tournament. The team had a 1-0 shut out against Robinson in the first round of the tournament, and they proceeded to upset T.C. Williams 2-1 to win the Northern District Title, the first ever obtained by Lake Braddock. The girls then advanced to the Northern Regional Tournament where they were defeated by Hayfield in the first round 2-1. Leading scorer Tisha Carey (3), who was voted Best Offensive, Mellisa McNulty (14) and Leila Haack (6) were all exceptional on the offense. Cathy Kerrigan, who was voted Best Defensive and Most Valuable Player (1), and Stephanie McKay (20) were standouts on the defense. Even though these girls were outstanding contributors, the team worked as a whole to gain their victories.

As her opponent rushes to capture the ball, Leila Haack (6) strives to reach it first.

Before moving the ball up the field, Ann Marie Redican (4) contests her determined adversary.

"Our team is very young. We have more promise than any other team before. Our team is smart and these girls are impressive athletes," commented Carolyn Rice, J.V. Field Hockey coach. The team's aggressive attack led by Stephanie Chong (5), Michelle Kime (8), Karen Champigny (11), and Kathy Nidiffer (16) helped the team to a successful season. The tough defense allowed only one goal per game. Throughout the season, the outstanding player was chosen each week to be captain for the game. These girls were very consistent on the field which was reflected in their record. The team was very young, but had effective talent.

Coach Rice discusses strategy with Kathi Nidifer (16) before her entrance of the game.

Debbie Maddox (14) watches intently as s waits to subsitute into the Woodson game.

ori, I don't really know what to say. Its been a lot of fun this year and I'm so glad we became friend. Seeing you're beautiful smile every morning really brightened up my days. You really are a sweet person. I know you are going to be real big success. You should keep up your dancing because you really are a good dancer. I was your #1 fan of all time. I enjoyed watching you dance a lot. You were the best one out there. Anyway, Promise me you will have a great summer.

In the last regular tournament of the season, Mark Eichelman prepares to putt the ball in an effort to win the match against Oakton.

Senior David Gilroy "gorillas" his driver on the first tee in the match against Oakton.

The golf team experienced many changes this year. First of all, golf was switched from a spring sport to a fall sport. They also had a new coach, Dan Griel. The team, however, was not affected by these transitions. They proved this by playing well in their district tournaments. Mark Eichelman, David Gilroy, and Scott Hartung continually had low scores throughout the season. The team as a whole defeated West Springfield, Woodson, and T.C. Williams, thus having a 3-5 overall record. "The returning members were able to improve their game greatly while the new members show great potential for the future," commented senior Ed McFarland.

"Ace!" yelled Dana White. This was frequently heard on the Lake Braddock tennis courts during the Girls Varsity Tennis practice. "Our one and two players are the best," commented Coach Jean Worthington about her team. Player one was Wendi Burgess who was co-captain with player two, Laura Williamson. Wendi Burgess, Samantha Fisk, Geeta Khare, Huong Nguyen, and Charmain Sutherland were the only graduating seniors, so next year's team will be even stronger with the returning players and next year's rising freshmen. "We wouldn't be the team we are without our coach," said Laura Williamson. Due to the hard work and dedication of the team this year, they became "Aces of the Court."

The Boys Cross Country Team started the season with training at Camp Varsity in the Blue Ridge Mountains. The balanced team was lead by seniors Chris Bryce and Greg Watson. Freshmen Brian Kelly and sophomore Mike Anthony ran exceptionally well, while juniors Robbie Moye and Danny Seale contributed to the team. The Bruins, who were coached by Chris McDonald, took third in the Regional Invitational, as well as in the George Mason Invitational. A fourth place title was captured at the University of Virginia Invitational, another of the many victories that psyched the team up to place well in the state finals.

Moving Ahead

"Kristi Cassel is the front runner of the team with Linda Trew backing her up," commented Chris McDonald, coach of the Girls Cross Country Team. "Overall the team improved the whole season with eight or nine girls competing for the top seven varsity spots." The team placed sixth in the Northern Virginia Invitational Tournament, fourth in the George Mason University Meet, and ninth in the University of Virginia Invitational Meet. Leading the team this year were Susan Volpe, Linda Trew, Kristi Cassel, and Nancy Myzie. Even though three or four girls shined during the season, the whole team did an exceptionally good job.

Jump

The 1983 Boys Varsity Basketball Team dominated this year. After winning the trophy at the Jefferson Invitational Tournament, the Bruins went on to win several more exciting games. Leading the Bruins were captains Derrick Hensley (42) and Derric Turner (44) who both finished their high school careers, ably aided by senior teammates Mark Blackwell (50), Vince Santavicca (14), Charles Small (54), Greg Smith (22), and Brett Walters (40). Offensively, the Bruins did well with Turner (44), the team leader, averaging 14 points and 11 rebounds a game. Blackwell (50) and Mike Newell (30) each scoring several points. In the back court, the team had an excellent season led by Hensley (42) and Santavicca (14). To add to the thrilling games, Newell (30) and Turner (44) occasionally dunked the ball. Sadly, however Coach Hensley retired from coaching after 27 years. To Mike Newell(30), Coach Hensley, "helped players mentally. The whole team benefited from his knowledge of the game. We were fortunate to play under him." In return, Coach Hensley was "happy with the way the team played. They were always improving with a good, positive attitude." That attitude, coupled with sheer dedication helped the team to be the best.

Success

The Boys J.V. Basketball Team started off the season with an impressive 64-54 victory over Jefferson. While most Lake Braddock students were at home over the holidays, the J.V. Team traveled to Jefferson twice to compete in the Christmas Tournament. They won the tournament by defeating Parkdale in the semi-finals 61-46, and Jefferson in the finals 52-44. Also, the tournament was important because it marked their second victory over Jefferson. In districts, the team must play everybody twice. Coach Greg Hogue praised the team by saying, "The team maintained a very positive attitude throughout the season. I consider the season to be a successful one because of the team spirit and willingness to sacrifice personal goals for the good of the team. Every team member played a role in the success."

During the Christmas holidays, the Freshman Team traveled to Jefferson to play in an Invitational. There the Bruins defeated Marshall and St. Stephens to capture the first place trophy. Marc Luce (14) commented, "Our team has the will power and potential of a championship team." The 83-84 coach was Karl Studt who led the team to a successful season. Looking Good

When asked how they were doing this year, the Girls Varsity Basketball Team kept saying that they had improved since last year and were continuing to increase their efficiency in a number of areas. On the average, the team shot much better, and defensively they had become more aggressive. Also, the varsity girls had proof in black and white of their improvement-the percentage of rebounds they were getting, as well as the number of free throws they were hitting. Coach Sonnek commented that "the team is on an upward trend that we hope to take advantage of this season." The team's starting center, Wendy Burgess, said that "if the team continued to look as good as it had, they would be able to take on any team in the district."

Born on the Court

Junior Varsity Girls - Basketball's their name and winning's their game. This years J. V. Team won most of their twenty games, and as said by the team's Coach Brian Sonnek, "They have the ability to win very close games," which helped them in many tight spots throughout the playing season. Led by some of their best players Teri O'Shea (25), Beth Pontius (31), and Monica Coleman (14), the team swept through the year with surprising success, beating even the toughest of teams like Robinson and Woodson. "It was long and hard, but it was worthwhile," commented Debbie Maddox (12) about the season. The team's successes did not come without work, though at times they looked as if they were "born on the court." The J. V. Girls Team practiced diligently three days a week, 5:30 to 7:45 in between game days, striving for perfecion. "It's worth it because in the end we're satisfied," said Debbie Maddox (12). And satisfied they were, having one of the best teams in recent years.

As the defending AAA State Champions, the Girls Varsity Gymnastic Team began the season with an optimistic outlook. Rather than focusing on individual achievement, the girls took a new approach and strove for improvement as a whole. To reach their goal, they practiced every day after school from 3:30 to 5:30. Their hard work paid off as the entire team performed superbly in all ten meets and invitationals they participated in throughout the year. In the first gymnastic tournament ever hosted by Lake Braddock, the Bruin girls placed second out of sixteen teams who came from all over the state to compete in the "North-South Invitational." Coach Ann Ripley stated that "one of the keys to the success of the team was the fact that the girls worked well together and supported each other through practices and competitions."

Jon,

I'm glad I got to know you this year and being in your first (Exciting) period class. It was a wide fellow but sure was fun. I've got one more year of high school until I too will go to college. I'm really getting to hate school. You're lucky because it's almost all behind you. I wish you luck in college and don't get fun too much -Teddie.

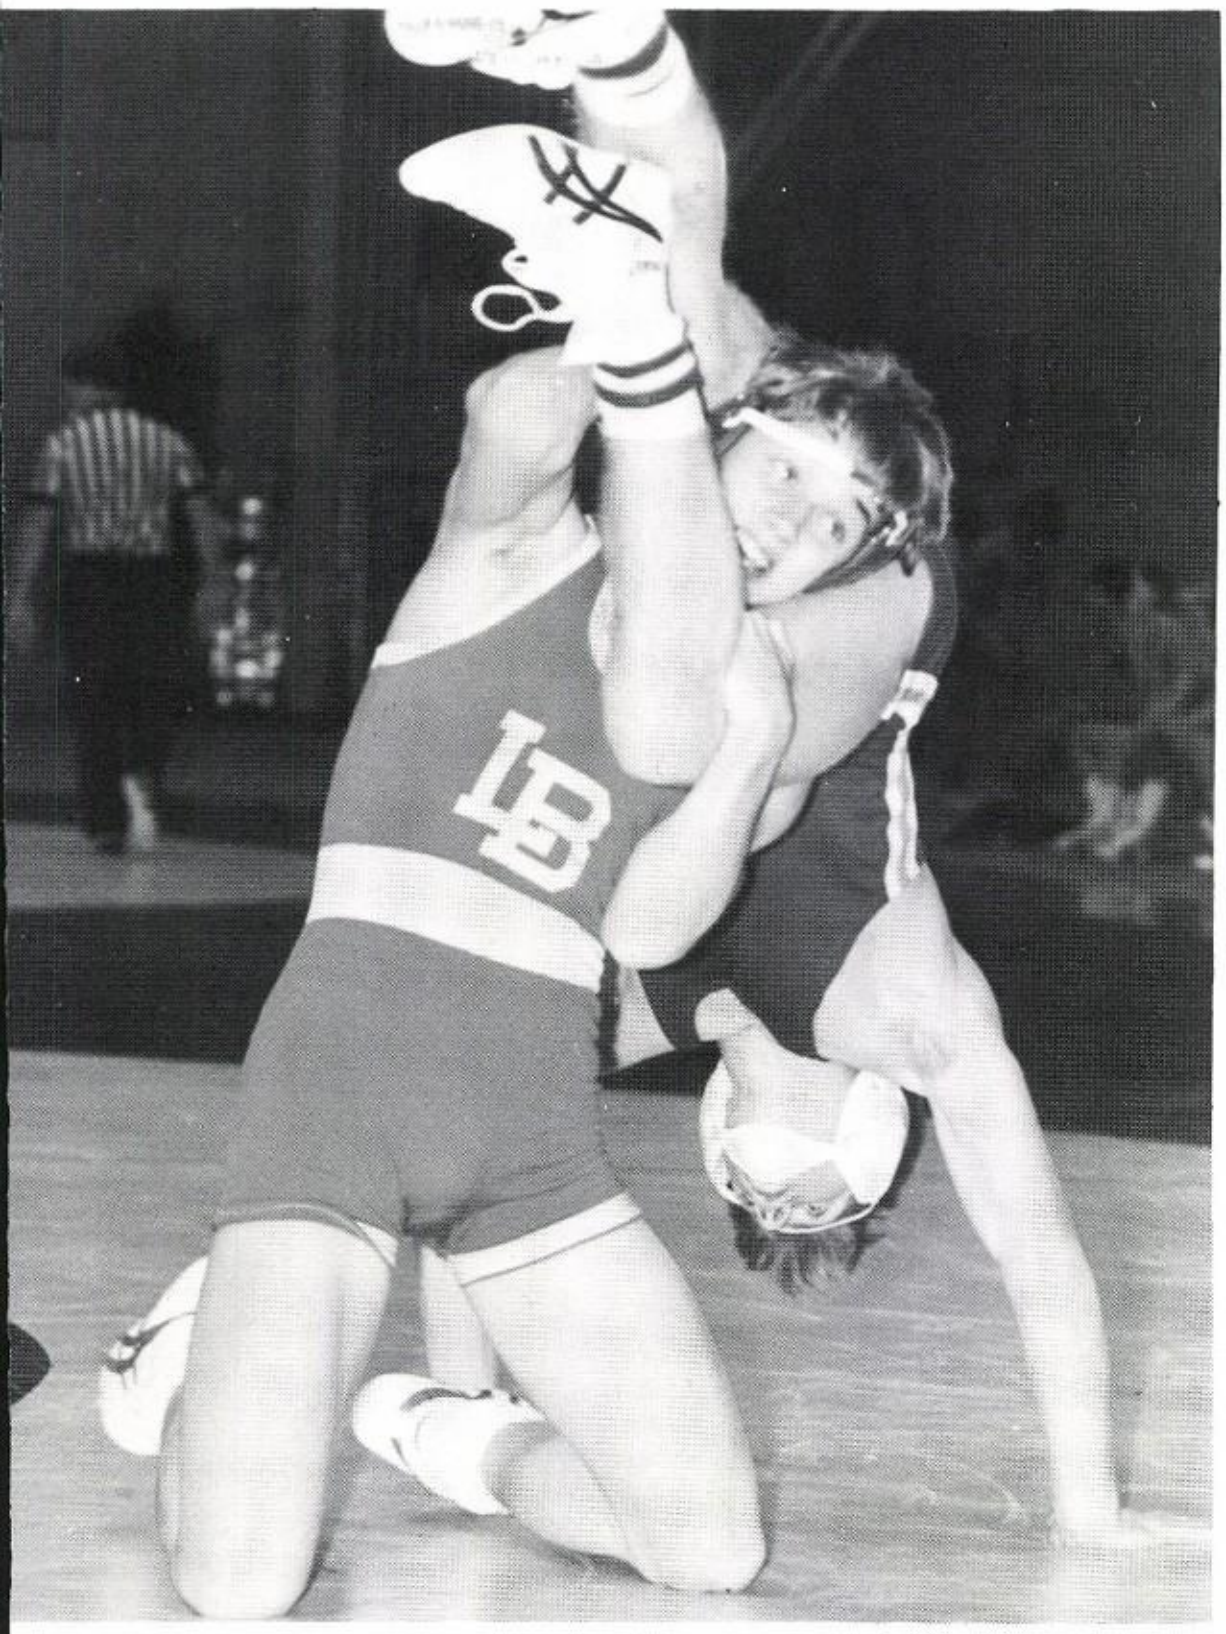
New Staff



Throughout the Varsity Wrestling team's season, there were a number of accomplishments under returning Coach Alan Thompson and new Coach Dan Richards. The team learned new maneuvers which led them to a record of 5-8-2. The wrestlers concentrated on their footwork, new take downs and pinning combinations. For four months each wrestler took on a grueling schedule consisting of two hour practices every day after school, long weekend practices, as well as watching their weight. Although wrestling requires much hard work, at the end of the season the wrestlers all felt that the experience they had gained was worthwhile. The Bruins started the season with three quick wins over Langley, Lee and Woodbridge. The team was led by seniors Timmy Kan, Tommy Nicholson, Paul Stewart and junior Rich Mozingo. Mozingo added, "We have a young team which should do very well in the future." Seniors Kan and Nicholson wrestled well by ending their season with a undefeated record. Coach Thompson stated, "All of the guys wrestled hard and did a good job."

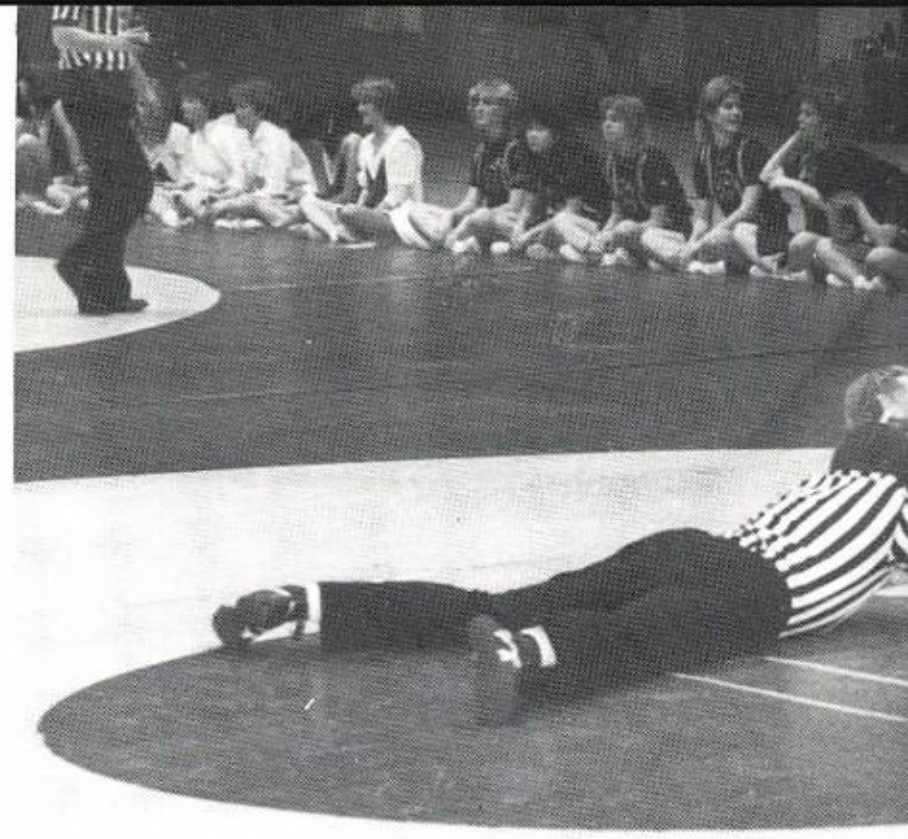
Pin to Win



The 1983 Lake Braddock J.V. Wrestling Team had a very good season this year. Head Coach Dan Richards remarked that the team was "a good nucleus for the Varsity Team. They did well in picking up the style Coach Thompson teaches." Throughout the season, team captains were selected weekly from among those who wrestled an outstanding match the previous week. Even without designated captains, the team was led by Eric Helms, Brent Mitchell, and Robert Shearer. Vic Illemszky said that the team was "an all around great team. We learned a lot and enjoyed it at the same time." Amid the perfecting of skills and the watching of weight, the team did a great job of continuing Lake Braddock's proud tradition.

Discipline

During a five minute match, a wrestler must show pure concentration and coordination. This year's Lake Braddock Freshman Wrestling Team showed these qualities which helped them finish the season successfully. Led by outstanding wrestlers Pat Kiely and Robbie Carraway, the team was "one of the best freshman teams I've ever coached," expressed Coach Dan Richards. As in any other sport, wrestling demands good discipline in addition to good fundamentals. Overall, the team had "excellent discipline," explained Pablo Rieppi. Thanks to the coach we developed a positive attitude and the required skills." Even though there were different captains every week, the wrestlers managed to lead themselves through a grueling daily work out, as well as controlling their diets. All of this was accomplished to show that they could do it just as well as anyone else.

Well-Rounded

Both coaches, Diane DiSandro and Nancy Morris, when asked about the Boys and Girls Swim and Dive Team, said that the team was well-rounded. "We have a whole team; no one person is carrying the rest of the team," added Coach Morris. Despite the lack of a Dive Coach, both swim coaches learned about diving this season to help the Dive Team successful season. Along with the Dive Team, the Swim Team did extremely well. While breaking records, Karen Malachowski and Kerri Karb helped the girls team to win meets against West Springfield and Robinson. Other outstanding members were Tracey Jeshow and captain Krista Leap. The boys also proved they were the team to beat with Bret Cade, Blair Marshall, Andy Schwartz and Paul Busa as captain. All swimmers and divers gave up many hours of their free time to practice at Wakefield Park at 3:00 P.M. and 4:00 P.M. rotating practices. Brian Martin commented, " The team is talented but our coaches are willing to work with us and push our team to number one."

Practice Makes Perfect

Practice was one of the most important ingredients for a successful track team. This year's Boys Indoor Track Team was just that-successful. They practiced hard, working out two to three hours a day, every day a week, and refined their talents to produce one of Lake Braddock's finest. Runners Charlie Volpe, Chris Bryce, Greg Watson, and Dan Seal showed their skill in many events, including the four by 800 where they rewrote the books by setting a new record at eight minutes and fourteen seconds at the Mason Invitational. Other competitors like John Newton and John Pink, displayed their hard work at every meet in which they competed. Dan Seale said "In practice you get out of it what you put into it," and judging by the quality of this year's team, they had put in excessive time and effort.

Unified and Strong

The Girls Indoor Track Team, coached by McDonald, Crouse, Kammerdeiner, and Kidd was guided to an outstanding success this year not only in their competitions but also as a whole team. This year's team had many excellent competitors including Nina Brent, Katherine Birge, Jenny Jackson and many newcomers like Dana Boone, Adria Hicks, and April Hicks. The girls team also broke several school records. One of them was the Girls 4-3-2-1 with a final time of 532.4 beating the old record by .4 seconds. They also qualified for the Districts and Regionals of Northern Virginia. Their unity was shown throughout the year in the method they competed as a whole instead of individually. Their feelings were best described in a quote by Nancy Myzie, "The most exciting part of a meet is when you see your teammates do well."

The Team Behind the Team

Behind every big football, basketball, or tennis competition, many dedicated individuals shared in making a team effort of their own. These people included the trainers, managers, and the coaches. Led by Joe Stein, the student trainers helped each athlete through some painful experiences. "Since I was interested in physical therapy, I attended classes to become a trainer," said Danelle Armstrong. "I also get the opportunity to meet a lot of people." Along with the trainers, the managers backed the teams with their support and their hard work. Marianne Helms and Trent Kubo helped manage the Lacrosse Team because "It gives us a chance to do something constructive, taking stats, as well as something fun, watching the action on the field." But no team was a real team without the coach. "I coach because I enjoy it," commented J.R. Matthews, football coach. "It gives me the opportunity to continually relive my life through my players." The combination of the trainers, managers, and coaches have resulted in a Soccer State Championship, a Girls Gymnastics State Title, and a District Champion Field Hockey Team. No team was complete without "the team behind the team."

At a vigorous practice, Coach Clark watches intently as players practice a defensive play.

Keeping track of times, Coach Crouse records the last runner's time at the Woodson meet.

Get Your Kicks

Skill and determintation were clearly evident in this year's Boys Varsity Soccer Team. Even though this pool of talented young men won the AAA State Championship last year, they still worked hard to perfect their game. Parade's All American Tommy Nicholson and Matt Wayland dominated this year's forward line with their precise passing and quick drives. To support the forward line were midfielders John Elliott and Jeff Kime who made sure the pace of each game was set and maintained. Furthermore, Larry Bennett showed his skills at both ends of the field by playing the stopper position. In the backfield the defense was led by sweeper Alan Anderson. To assist him were Mahlon Moore and John Dumbleton. Tying everything up for this stupendous team was goalie Mark Wayland. At the beginning of the season when Coach Cicala was asked how he felt about the up and coming games, he replied,"A good nucleus has returned from last year, and we should be very solid. It will take time to work in the new players." To sum everything up, Alan Anderson commented,"There were a lot of new young faces on the team this year, and as the season progressed, Coach Cicala and the team really came together. The players learned to work as a team. Along with this major factor, the dedication that each player gave to the program also played a significant part in the team's success."

Extreme concentration and skill are displ

Lori, well (How many yearbook signings smart ass w/ that)? This year has gone so fast! I can't decide whether it's good or BAD! Good for you all but BAD for me!! What will I do! I wish we could have got to know each other just a little better, but you know why, not that would have mattered but who knows!!?!? Maybe that shouldn't escape this page!!!? Here I write on what could have been the third state champs, but we let down and that hurt us!! I hope you come back and visit me next year and (shit) the year after that, which will finally be my SENIOR year. Long way off much? Give me a call this summer (455-7044) I hope people don't get out of touch this summer. Party every night I hope. I wish you good luck next year and the years to come!

Solid Goal!

Although the girls Varsity Soccer Team went into the season as the defending Northern Region Champions, they did not slack off at all. From the very beginning emphasis was placed on team coordination and cooperation, as well as avoiding injuries. Even though the team had graduated five seniors, it remained strong with talented players such as senior Julie Cunningham in midfield, junior Amy McDowell in the goal, and senior Amy Patton on defense. When asked how she felt about being in the position to defend the Northern Region title, Coach Carolyn Rice commented that "Since we're on top, everyone's shooting for us, and they've got nothing to lose."

After heading the ball Amy Patton remains suspended in mid-air.

During practice senior Marie Alves (15) concentrates on getting the ball in a chest trap.

On the practice field Kim Chong (4) works on dribbling, control, and kicking.

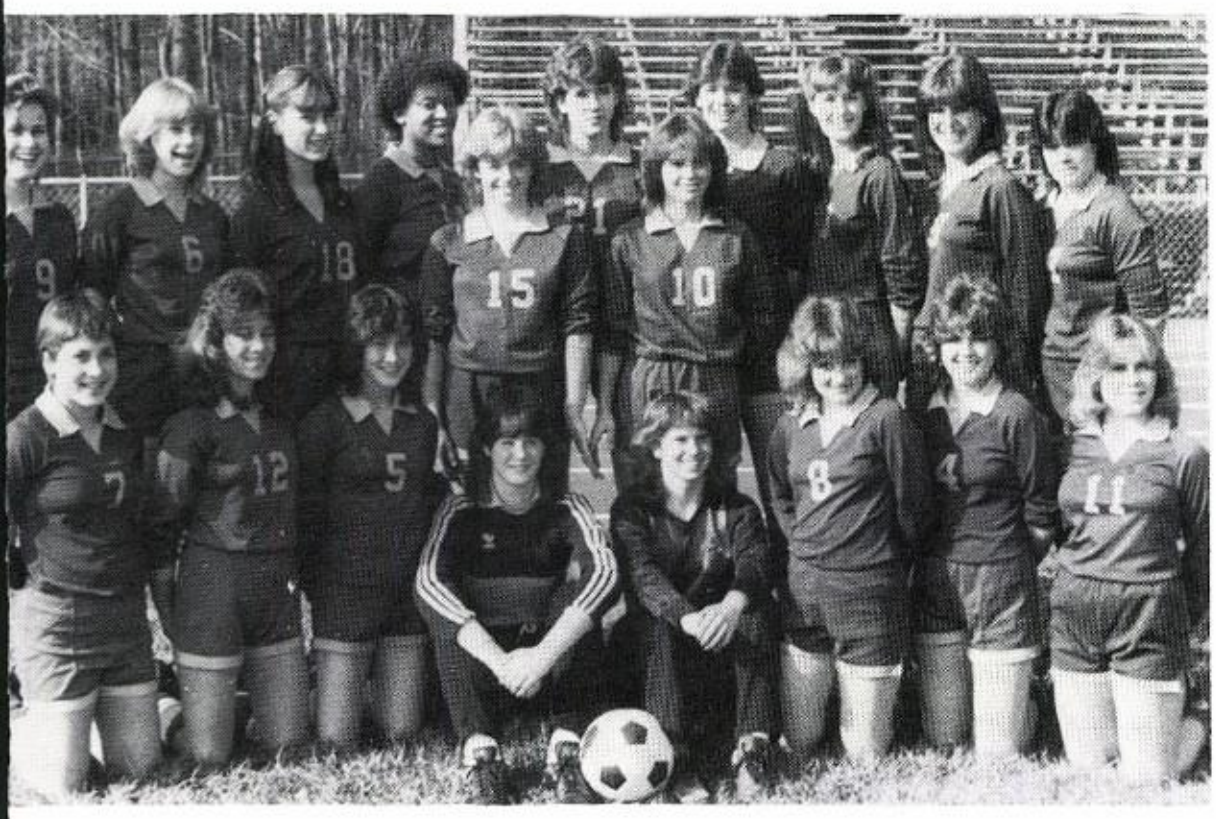
Spring Fever



With the coming of spring, Coach LaCava and Coach Sonnek looked forward to a great season in J.V. soccer. Mr. LaCava, who coached J.V. girls, remarked, "Since I teach indoors the better part of the year, my coaching gives me an excuse to be outside." Both coaches enjoyed working with the younger high school students, and they very often came into contact with those players who possessed a natural talent but needed to build up their confidence. "It is such a wonderful feeling to see a young player with potential, grow as a result of building his confidence," explained Mr. Sonnek, coach of J.V. boys. In contrast, Mr. LaCava coached in the hopes of broadening his own horizons concerning soccer, while Mr. Sonnek coached for the excitement of the scrimmages and games. Both coaches, though, clearly expressed their enjoyment in coaching soccer and hoped they will continue in years to come.

In a Pinch

This year's Bruin Varsity Baseball team showed the qualities of supreme coordination and fitness from all its members. Though the team had many returning seniors, they were still able to improve with the help of their exhausting three hour practices. In early March, Head Coach Mike Wells was forced to face a difficult decision-who to choose for a skilled team. Out of the twenty-seven participants who tried out, only seventeen were fortunate enough to make the team. The coach selected the team based on their attitude, fundamentals, skills, talents, and work habits. Coach Wells added, "This year's team has shown the best work habits I've seen in the last seven years. This helped us a great deal in facing our tough competition in the Northern District." With the help of their terrific talent, skill, and coordination, the team was able to pull off a fantastic season.

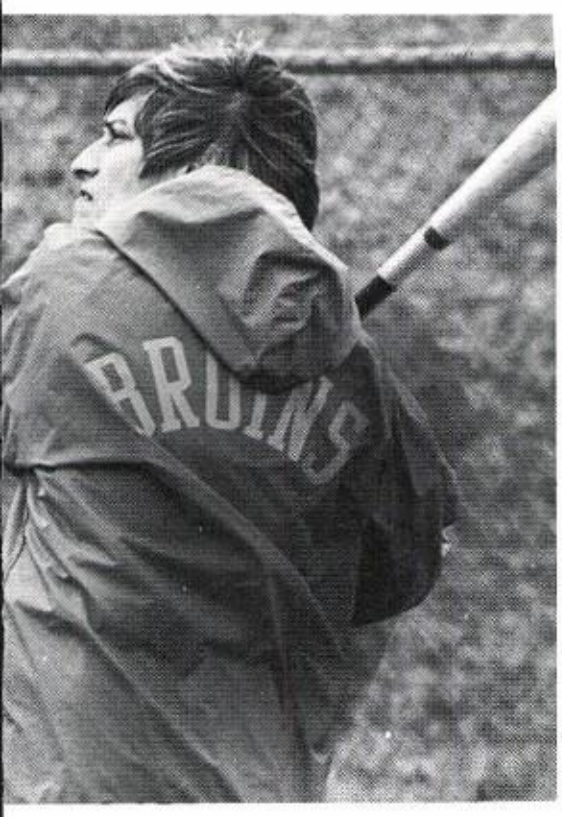
While practicing his pitching, Chip Koscielniak shows his concentration in hurling a strike.

In an all out sprint for first base, Bryan Morton arrives safely before his teammate Jim Cademartori can tag him out.

Expertise



The optimism was high for this year's Girls Varsity Softball Team. Over thirty girls tried out, nine of them returning from last season. The six returning lettermen were Wendi Burgess, Tisha McKay, Ann Marie Hall, Stephanie McKay, Virginia Medeiros, and Kelly Walsh. The positions of catcher and shortstop had to be replaced. Coach Norton stated,"If we get a good performance in these positions, with what is expected from the rest of the team, we could go all the way to State." The coach expected the experienced players to lead the team to victory. The overall feeling was very positive. Last year, the Girls Varsity Softball Team placed second in the District and Regional Championships to West Springfield both times. The team and coach both had high hopes for an outstanding season.

During practice, Coach Norton displays the proper position for swinging the bat.

Senior Tisha Carey practices throwing a fastball to Kelly Walsh.

After receiving a catch, Pamela Owens returns the ball.

In preparation of returning the ball, Dawn Mayfield steps back to throw.

Goals

The J.V. Baseball coach J.R. Mathews was quoted as saying that he wanted to achieve three goals. "First and foremost, the boys should have fun. Secondly, the players should learn baseball skills. The third objective was to win more games than they lost." To achieve these goals, the team members practiced from 3:30 to 5:30 everyday Monday through Friday doing everything from running to bunting. Mike Frigault who helped lead the bruins to a successful season summed it up well, "Simple fundamentals and lots of practice really did pay off."

Shawn Stofko and Everette Russel think about warmer weather as they warm up before practice.

Tensions

In softball this year, the girls faced many obstacles. The first problem was 70 girls trying out for only 15 positions. To qualify for the team, the girls had very strenuous tryouts. Early and late practices concentrated on base running, fielding, pitching, and hitting techniques. To add to the tensions of tryouts, the girls had to adapt to the coaching style of a new coach, Gayle Doane. In spite of all these tensions, the team reaped many rewards. Manager Alison Conley commented,"We have a strong team and working together paid off."

To assure that the ball does not get away, Beth Rows leans over the baseline.

AIM HIGH

With high hopes of becoming the top contending team in the North Eastern Section, the Boys Gymnastics Team devoted countless hours to their sport. Practicing after school, while other students enjoyed their free time, the boys refined their routines on the parallel bars, high bar, floor, and pommel horse. Outstanding members included Blair Marshall, Eric Frazier, Mark Soh, and Mike Rhee. Individual gymnasts worked hard for themselves, their team, and their school. Eric Frazier summarized their efforts when he said, "We're going to go far."

Ace

After numerous challenge matches, eighteen experienced and enthusiastic boys were chosen from fifty candidates to make up a Varsity and Junior Varsity Team. Experience varied from players with state tournament backgrounds to local club teams. Returning lettermen who made up the core of this year's team include Seniors Sean Nolan and John Williamson (co-captains) and Bob Thomas. Joey Maranto, a sophomore, was considered to have a bright future in playing tennis. Sophomore Jeff Babb and transfer Junior Chuck Hyatt made a significant contributuion to the team. With the addition of a new J.V. squad, this year's squad had more strength than ever before in Lake Braddock's history. As summed up by Coach Lisi, "The depth of competition will keep true pressure on everyone to perform their best all year."

Head track and field coach, Chris McDonald was very optimistic about the season,"We have many good athletes this year." Expected to perform very well this year, the girls' and boys' teams had several promising athletes. The girls' team was lead by Cathron Birge (middle distance), Christi Cassell (distance), Jenny Jackson (high jump), and sprinters Adria Hicks, April Hicks, Dana Boone, Mary Gifford, Nancy Myzie, and Jenny Jagelski. Distance runners Chris Bryce, Mike Anthony, John Newton, and Danny Seale were a few of the runners that lead the boys' team. There was also Mike Alexander (sprinter), Roger Boone (high jump), Mike Newell (high jump), Chris Cecka (long jump), Scott Bignell (sprint and hurdles), Scott Turgeon (pole vault), and Pete Ward (shot put). Lori, I'm glad that I had a chance to meet you this year. you are a nice person and are a very fun person to be with. I had a lot of fun talking to you and Renee during soccer and Baseball games. I only wish we could have meet earlier in the year, because like I said your fun to be with. Oh- have and loonies from the Psyco ward knocked down in the lawn of the hospital later. I would have freaked. I bet you did. I still can't believe that It's almost over, 4 years of High School. They all were fun, going to parties and getting wasted was a big part of it. By the way before you go off to college you have to tell me what the three game is. I'm dying to know. p276

On the night of October 7th the Varsity Football Team faced Fort Hunt for the annual Homecoming game. Early in the game the Bruin's flew down the field making two touchdowns. Victory was in sight at the half as the team ran off the field with 13 points on the board. This optimistic vision began to fade after halftime when the Federals put the heat on with a 70 yard touchdown, on a punt by David Boyle, in the third quarter. Another 7 points were made by Fort Hunt during the fourth quarter bringing the score to 14 to 13 in the Federal's favor. The game ended with Lake Braddock still down by one point,

Lori,

It's the end of another year? No! It's the end of our SENIOR year! And I don't know about you, but I've waited for this TOO LONG!! It's been fun, though, for me, and I hope for you can say the same. I'll never forget going insane during Homecoming! Pullin' on the 187 Days, the senior privileges, Christmas parties, studying for calculus and gov't (that night at your house w/ the red eyes in the window!) none of that would have been the same without you! They butchered my grote at the back of the senior sketch, so I'm writing it in everyone's book: With mimosa in hand, shades on my face, and a smile from a friend, I can take on the world. My live goes to everyone who's made it worthwhile - take care, God bless, and remember: Everyone deserves 3 things in life - good health, happiness, and enough gas to get to California in a TR-7! Keep smiling everyone! Videos at my house. "Can you believe they cut that? - RRR - I'm so kicked!

The loss was disappointing, but the crowd could not help being proud of their team, and particularly Bill Link and Craig Murden, who were recognized for their excellent performance in the game. Immediately following the game an alumni reception was held in the Recital Hall. Each class was generous enough to donate a cake, and the walls were decorated with old yearbook photos. There was an exceptionally good turnout totaling approximately 200 graduates from Lake Braddock. The reception turned out to be a great success and an appropriate ending to an unforgetable evening.

Lake Braddock's halls were filled with students on August 29, the first day of school. Returning students had the chance to see old friends again, while new students made new acquaintances and tried to familiarize themselves with the school. A record 4349 students were enrolled at Lake Braddock, the largest number in the school's history. In addition, the first day promised many changes for the school year. Homeroom was eliminated and second period was lengthened to accommodate announcements. Also, the administration strengthened its anti-drug policy. Stricter punishments were created for those who were guilty of drug or alcohol possession, and T-shirts that advertised drug or alcohol products were banned. These changes, however, did not dampen the atmosphere of excitement that was experienced throughout the school. All in all, August 29 was just the first of many hectic but exciting days that followed.

Lori & Renée run up the stairs and start to walk a little faster. Then we think hey they're not that bad, what the heck. So we discreety stop atid look at the Xmas display (more like pretend were looking at the Christmas display.) We finally met them and exchanged numbers. Boy, doesn't that seem so long ago. The first time we went out was great, remember Uncle Alex?? First, he's cool and rings the doorbell and yells "they're black!!". That was so funny. We'll have to visit Uncle Alex this summer. Senior Kathy Forgas! One of the most exciting halftime events was the announcement of the 1983-'84 Homecoming queen. The court consisted of freshmen Paige Geiger and Chris Rives; sophomores Beth Stoy and Noel LaFontaine; juniors Karen Champigny and Wendy Levitz; seniors Debbie Dooley, Jenny Jackson, Jenny Rowzie, Amy Patton and Kathy Forgas. During halftime, each girl was escorted across the field by her father, while the band played on and the color-guard waved their flags. Later, purple and gold balloons went up when Kathy Forgas was announced as the new Homecoming queen. Afterwards, Heidi Swenk, last year's queen, gave up the title as well as the crown to the new queen. On the whole, the announcement of this year's Homecoming queen proved one of the exciting events of Homecoming week.

But we went on to 1984. The major event which started off a good year was our trip to Sugarbush Vermont. It ↓

Bruin Spirit Comes Alive

Kicking off Homecoming Week were the Fall Follies and the Bonfire. On October 5 at 7:30 P.M., a spirited crowd converged to the Little Theatre to support their classes and organizations as skits were performed. First place was taken by the Keyettes for their rendition of "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star...Bruin." S.G.A. won second place but forfeited their earnings to the Class of '89, since they sponsored the Fall Follies. The Class of '84 was awarded third place. Equally important in our spirit week was the Bonfire on October 6 at 7:30 P.M. A blood-thirsty crowd threw Fort Hunt dummies into a roaring flame. While watching the flames engulf the dummies, the Bruin football team and fans geared up for Friday night's Homecoming game.

No more toothpaste all over me either. No more kiddie hills!! Maybe next time we'll be going down the expert hills with Ann. Yeah Right! Remember our rides picking up the skis with Kevin? Karma Chameleon. Private Eyes are Watching you. That was so funny. It didn't snow for us in Vermont like Kevin said it would. Remember the weird girl at Roy Rogers who threw French Fries at us, Normalness, I would have loved to see Debbie B. beat her up. Next year we won't make it to Sugarbush, but we'll have to plan similar trips like it, come up to Syracuse whenever, there are so many ski resorts up there. I'll come down for the warm weather.

Heres one date we'll both never forget nor will anyone else. Feb. 17th, when everyone thought we went to T.C. whatever with them!!! I can still see it now. 2 wierdos at a Basketball game crying their eyes out carrying a bag with uniforms & pom poms ready to turn in. We sure walked around alot. Now that we think back & picture it, we both made fools out of ourselves. It was worth it, I hope it made the bitch feel >

Wrapping up the Homecoming festivities was the annual Homecoming Dance, the first semi-formal dance of the 1983-1984 school year. Held on October 8, 1983, hundreds of couples showed up to participate in the gala event. When asked about the dance Dale Rumberger commented, "It was the best attended Homecoming Dance in the last five years, almost 800 couples attended." Sound Tech provided a variety of music to suit the diverse tastes of those who desired to dance. The SGA tastefully decorated the cafeteria to capture the theme "A Sparkling New Decade." Once again tradition prevailed with semi-formal attire, flowers, along with the oppportunity to have pictures taken. Beth Stoy summed it up, "It was a great dance!"

Fun and Games

Crafts! Games! Food! Prizes! Fun! That's what the Fall Festival offered. On a sunny Saturday, Sept. 24, people started to crowd on the blacktop at 10:00 in the morning to celebrate the Fall Festival. French pasteries, fried chicken, photography, Christmas gifts, and games such as the Sponge Toss, Shooting Stars, and the ever popular Zoo Dip were all an intregal part of this successful day. The Swing Singers entertained with a medley of show tunes, and there were two performances of the faculty play Free To Be You and Me. Late in the afternoon, the track enthusiasts ran in the three-mile Bear-a-Thon and captured prizes. Although the main festival was over at 5:00, the festivities continued with a spaghetti dinner followed by a dance sponsored by the class of '84 from 8:00 until 11:30. The day was a great success, and the Bruin spirit came through once again.

A Night To Remember

For the first time in the history of Lake Braddock, a Homecoming parade marched through the Lake Braddock community. It featured the class floats, marching band, cheerleaders, class officers, and the Homecoming court. The parade started on Ashborne Drive and continued on to the school. Being right before the game, this event proved to be a big success. However, the show did not end here. Everyone was eagerly waiting for the presentation and announcement of this year's float winners. When announced, the Senior class float won first place with a rainbow. Second place went to the intermediates who featured a Bruin bear reading a book. The sophomore class took third place with a baby Bruin playing with blocks. The fourth and final place went to the Freshmen class who presented a space shuttle with the quote "The sky's the limit" on it. It was obvious that each class made their greatest effort in making their floats and had reason to be proud. As marching band member Linda Siatis concluded, "The parade, which was a successful addition to the other Homecoming activities, and the presentation of the floats added more spice to the Homecoming activities."

The Varsity Drill members wait until the announcement of the float winners to release the ballons.

Care about the Aroo Crew now, especially one former member. That's it for the summer, the start of school was too ea the 29th of August!! Whatever?! We were lucky that we end up with 2 classes together. Good ol' Biology, Rundiks (Book '09 class). That class was like a study hall, except for G Ill never forget the rueben sandwich (Greater omentum), the chicken (muscles), & Jeff Jones poking constantly at it, even trying to poke out its eyes. What a winner! We've definitely got to visit him at Vineyard College, wherever that it, Keep wearing the same stinky grey sweat-shirt for 3 weeks straight. Smelled good! Matters if you change the shirt underneath we never saw it anyway. Mr. Rundiks lectures were never boring either. We always heard him even with his face an inch from the wall or his face buried in a book. (A+ss+!) Its a good thing that both you and Annie were in there too or I would have never survived. I wonder if Rudy ever saw us passing a note. Nope, we never did that. Those stools were so uncomfortable too. Ask Mike Jurjoski. pg

Living It Up

As soon as the 2:30 bell rang, life returned to normal for the students as they recuperated from a hard day of school. Many enjoyed the freedom by relaxing or spending their time with their friends doing constructive or just plain fun activities. Some liked to get together and compete athletically. Others liked to listen to music and enjoy the outdoors. Then there were those who were employed throughout local shops such as bookstores or supermarkets. Many worked in restaurants like McDonald's or Chi-Chi's. After school was the perfect time for the serious student to get some work done such as studying, homework, or special projects. There was a wide variety of after school activities such as clubs and all types of sports. With all the after school choices there was something for every student!

Celebrated & Congratulated

As their senior year came to a close, the class of '83 participated in the Senior Prom and Graduation, two of the most important events of their four years in high school. The Prom was held on May 26th in the Blue Room at the Shoreham Hotel in D.C. Entertainment for the evening was provided by the band Fancy Colours. Mrs. Susan Spage, class sponsor, commented that on prom night the seniors had "an overwhelming feeling of togetherness and unity." On June 2nd the graduation ceremonies brought the Class of '83 together one last time as high school students. The speeches given by valedictorian, Leilani Tamura, and salutatorian, Matt Mosler, established a somber mood and brought tears to many eyes, but the jovial nature of the soon-to-be-graduates could not be stifled as a handful of seniors pulled their final senior prank. During the speeches a cloud of bubbles began to float up from amidst the rows of seniors. The seriousness of the occasion could not overshadow the agitation felt by the students. The excitement of the evening can be summed up by one graduate who said, "I'm ready for life after high school!"

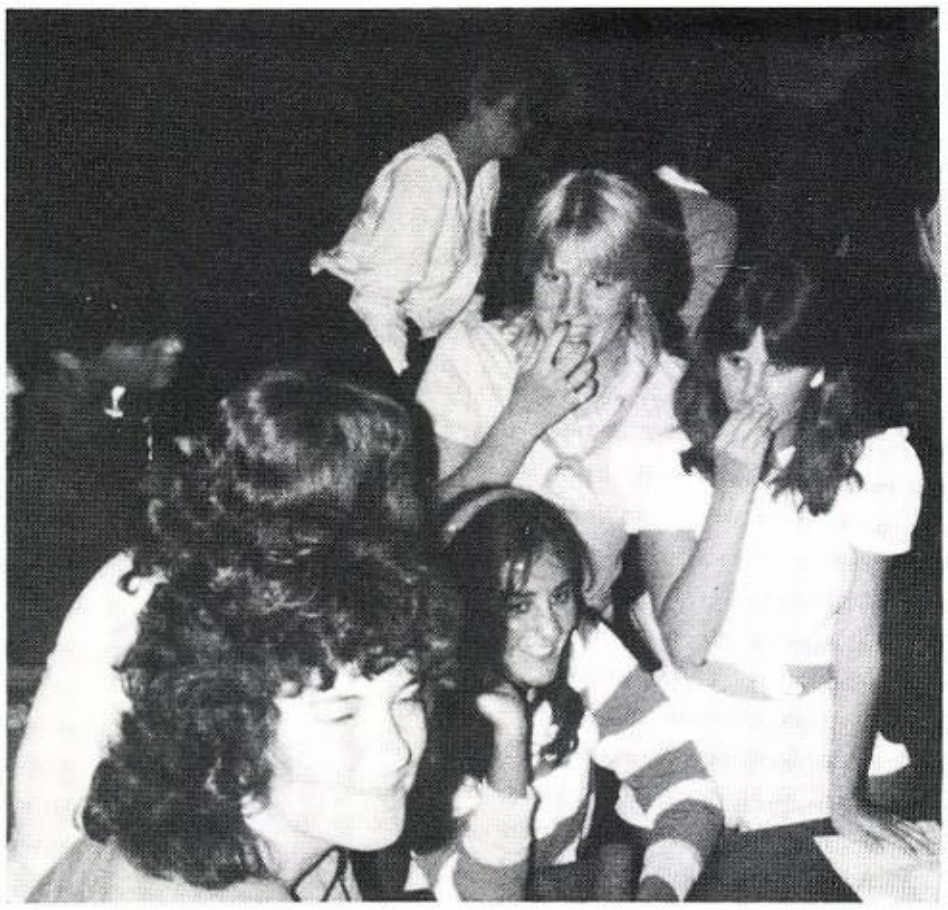
New Ideas for a New Decade

On August 11 and 12, seventy-seven students, teachers and parents assembled in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Madison, Virginia, for the fifth annual gathering of Camp Varsity. During the two days, the students, faculty, and parents got together in order to formulate new ideas for improving the school and school spirit. The trip also included selecting a theme for Homecoming Week and the school year. This was very successful as "A Sparkling New Decade" was decided upon as the Homecoming Theme and "Bruins at Their Best" was chosen as the year's theme. In addition, students learned new leadership techniques and discovered ways of improving the communication between class officers and students. Even with all the work, there was still time for some fun. There were activities such as boating, swimming, horseback riding, and a game of charades. Class of '84 treasurer, Bobby Herting explained,"It was an unforgettable way to unite student leaders and build friendships. Camp Varsity gave everyone an urge to start school and reach out to new students as well."

While enjoying the fresh air, Mr. Watts (Subschool IV principal) watches students go horseback riding.



In the process of coming up with ideas for a game of charades at Camp Varsity are Mrs. Monday, Sarah Stanley, Christy Dugan and Andee Bastianelli.

"Anything Goes"

"Being in Anything Goes was the greatest. We worked hard, but the close friendships formed and the success of the show made it all worth it," exclaimed Variny Yim, who played the role of Ching. Anything Goes, a broadway musical written by Cole Porter, was produced by the theatre department under the direction of Mr. V. C. Jones. This was the first musical produced where school-wide auditions were held, and the turnout was surprising. Many rehearsals were spent perfecting the singing, acting, and dancing of the 65 person chorus and cast. All of the dance routines were choreographed by Barbara Sheppard and Judy Johnston. The pit band, directed by Chris Johnston, accompanied the cast in the many varieties of musical numbers and added to the spice of the show. The many long rehearsals put in by the cast and directors paid off by the success of the show, which received four standing ovations. Summed up by chorus member Stephanie Franklin, "Anything Goes was a fantastic experience for both the cast and directors and provided many new friendships for the people involved. It was hard work, but we managed to make it a success."

As the end of 1983 drew near, both students and the faculty enjoyed the holiday spirit that was felt throughout the school. On the week of December 11-15, the Keyettes sold Santa-Grams to the students. They were distributed on Tuesday, December 20 during 2nd period. The Music Department performed several Christmas shows for the season. In addition, Christmas gifts were exchanged by students the week before vacation. The Kissing Bandits →

Witches, ghosts and clowns were just a few of the many costumes seen throughout the school on Monday, October 31. This Halloween Day showed more spirit of the bewitching day than any other previous year. Costumes such as detectives, girl scouts, dolls and pumpkins flashed throughout the halls during the course of the day. Much time and effort was put into the creating of the many costumes. For their creative endeavors of making and wearing the costumes, candy was given by S.G.A. to those students who were dressed out on Halloween Day. The day ended with enjoyable and memorable experiences. Lisa Rodrigues summed up the day by saying, "It was fun being something different one day out of the year."

Friendship can be shared between any two people as seen by Monica Wootten and Brian Sivak between fourth and fifth period.

Musical Spirit

Music is a source of inspiration, spirit, and hope, and the Intermediate Orchestra shared their talent with many people this year. The Intermediate Orchestra had put special effort into their practice this year which was proven on their December 20th orchestra concert in the Little Theatre. As the audience eagerly listened to the evening's performance from the beginning to the end, the enthusiasm and the talent was appreciated. Some of the musical pieces included "International Jingle Bells," "Serenade for Strings," and "Happy Hanukkah." Another concert was held on January 24th. As Mrs. Shaw said, "It is the best group I have ever had and I can't wait for the next concert." Music was a very special way of showing Lake Braddock's talent, and it would continue in years to come due to a good intermediate music program.

Throughout the year, the high school music program entertained everyone with several outstanding performances. On December 17, the Symphonic Chorale delighted the audience with some popular Christmas songs as well as entertaining them with their amusing skits. On December 6, the Symphonic Orchestra played a variety of songs ranging from "Sleigh Bells" to "Happy Hanukkah". On December 8, the Symphonic Band displayed their musical talent as they strived for success. In addition, the Swing Singers swung into action again as they thrilled everyone with their singing and dancing abilities. Finally, the Guitar Ensemble played the popular tunes "It Doesn't Have to Be That Way" and "We Need a Little Christmas" as the audience listened intently. On the whole, the high school music program added a special touch to the school as the members shared their musical abilities with the audiences.

High Fashion

An eclectic look in fashions was seen throughout the halls of Lake Braddock. Students were no longer stereotyped by the clothes they wore; they had their individual preferences. Many people took interest in the ever-popular Vans, O.P.'s and Espirit lines, pinstripe pants, and camouflage pants and shirts. Attire was livened up by adding personal touches such as scarves, ties, and bandanas. Parachute pants, mini-skirts, muscle-shirts, sweat clothes, and "Commander Salamander" shirts were also common sights among the student body. Tammy Payne commented " The clothes this year are not as trendy; we've been sticking to the more classical styles." Varied clothing styles on the market today provided students with endless choices to suit every mood or passing fancy.

Taking notes in her first period class, Caroline Williams adds a personal touch to her muscle shirt complete with bandanas and David Bowie buttons.

While participating in the NHS skit during the Fall Follies, Andrew Frie and Clay Cosby display a popular fashion trend of 1983-84: camouflage pants.

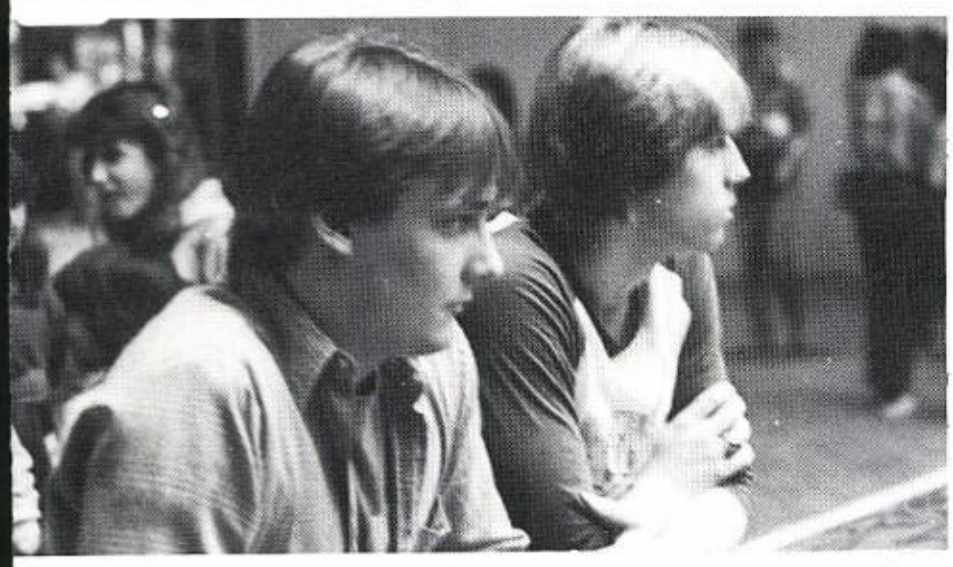
Weekends

PARTY

Not to see a student without that smile on his face when Friday came and the weekend started was a rare occasion. For all students, the weekend meant one thing: to have a good time and forget about school. There were many ways students preferred to spend their time during the weekend; everyone had different thoughts on what to expect during their days of leisure. Some saw Friday as a spring board off the platform of reality and believed a party did the trick. Many students visited local malls, went skating, or dined at restaurants with friends or sweethearts. Whichever ways students spent their weekends, as soon as Monday came, it was time to recapture that rigorous school determination and get back to the activities.

While searching for the new Culture Club album, Judy Wagner and Mike Souders pause to look at various popular music records at Harmony Hut.



On a Saturday afternoon at Springfield Mall, Jeff Young and Mark Affman seem to enjoy watching the passerbys.

Baltimore Harbor provides a great change of pace for Suzanne Sheats and Betsy Manners.

Live, Love, and Laugh

With such a large school students had the opportunity to become involved in social activities. Athletic events, cultural experiences and extra- curricular activities provided a few ways to become acquainted with various people. Football games and dances were all-time favorite "hangout spots" to laugh and have a good time. Spending time with friends continued after school hours with an occasional night at a friend's house, a midnight movie, or an evening in Georgetown. Different organizations offered various ways to send balloon-o-grams, flowers, or messages to a special friend or secret admirer. Futhermore, the S.G.A. held a Valentine Luncheon for all seniors who enjoyed sharing lunch with that "select someone." Overall, the school year brought with it many memories, long lasting friendships and a chance for everyone to live, love, and laugh.

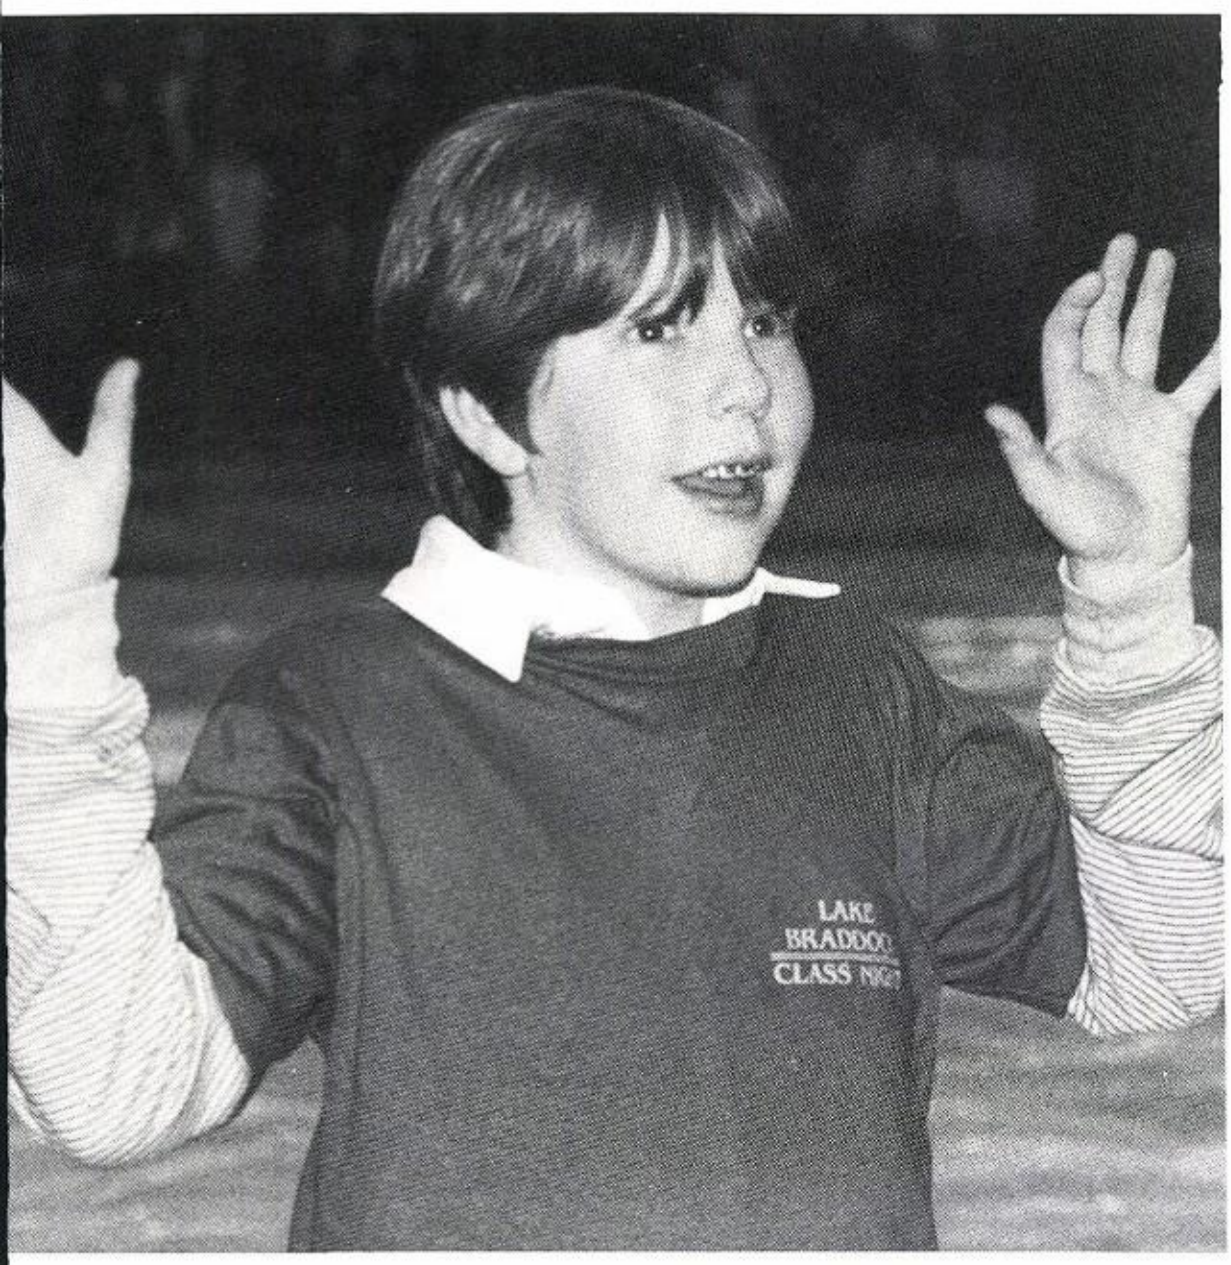
Spirit on the Run



Not only is Class Nite a fun way to spend the evening, but it's great for raising school spirit!" exclaimed Brenda Galdames, a Class of '86 participant. That's what Class Nite consited of; class spirit. The different classes competed against each other on various games including Simon Says, the Marshmallow Stuff, and the Clothing Relay. The teachers even shared in the act and competed against different classes in the Egg Toss and Pin the Nose on Mr. Rumburger. The Lake Braddock Varsity Drill Team performed a spectacular routine during halftime, which also helped to arouse spirit. By the end of the night, class spirit rose to a climax and tension started to build while the points were tallied up. The Class of '88 came in third place, the Class of '85 came in second place, and for the first time in Bruin history, there was a tie between the Class of '86 and the Seniors for first place. The night proved to be a great success as school spirit was felt by one and all.

Spirit of '84

Fun and excitement flowed through the halls and classes during school spirit week. Instead of the usual five days of constant spirit, only three days of spirit was allotted. On Monday, January 23, burgundy and gold dominated the halls, demonstrating Redskin fever. Students expressed their spirit for the Redskins, even though it was the day after their loss to the Raiders in Superbowl XVIII. On Wednesday, January 25, students dressed up in apparel displaying their favorite college or the colleges of their brothers and sisters. Friday, January 27, was the all-time favorite day: Purple and Gold Day. During fourth period, S.G.A. handed out candy to all participants of the spirited day. All in all, the week was successful and fun.

Drawn into the hype of Super Bowl XVIII, Doug Burum displays one of the many designs of T-shirts offered to support the Redskins.

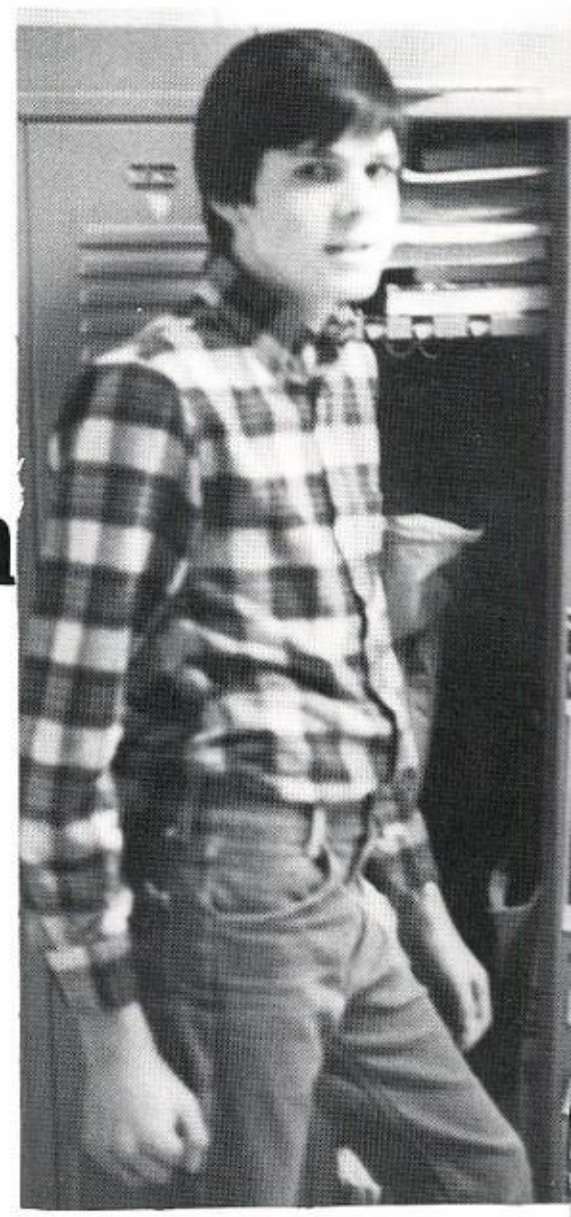
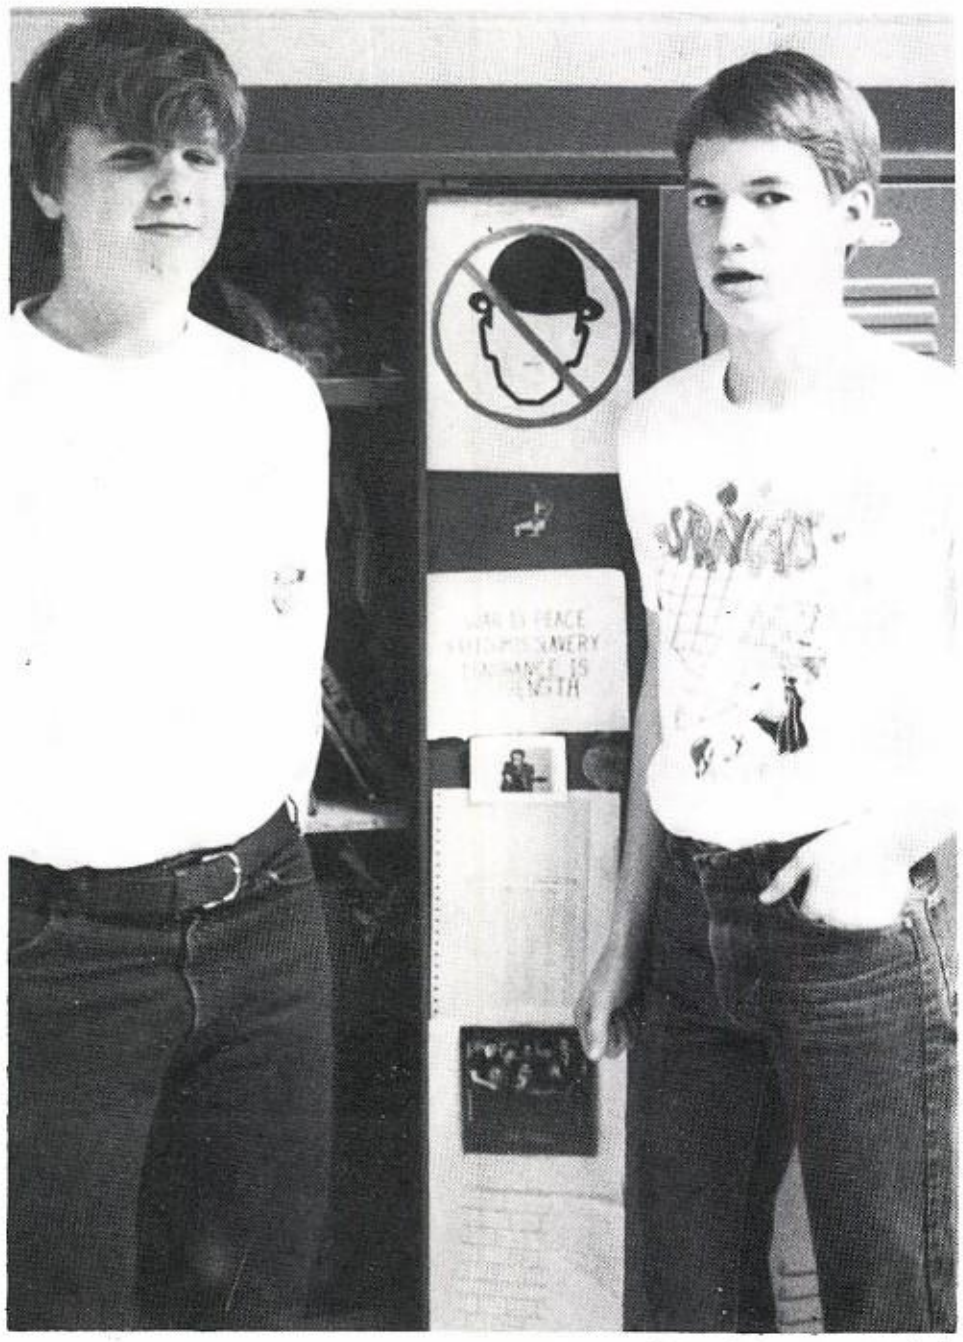
Decorating Delirium

What did every student have that was labeled everything from a pig sty to a creative outlet? The answer? Lockers! Not only did lockers create storage space for coats, books and other school materials, but they were also used for the students to express themselves. Lockers were decorated with posters, shelves, carpeting, wallpaper, stuffed animals, and mirrors. To celebrate birthdays, lockers were decorated with candy and crepe paper. As holidays approached, the decorations continually changed. Pictures of pumpkins and black and orange crepe paper were seen at Halloween along with tinsel and Christmas stockings at Christmas. In addition, lockers were used for a place to meet and report the latest gossip. Lake Braddock students were able to take a part of the school and convert it into something that reflected their unique tastes and personalities.



Before going to his second period class, Chris Fleuhr proudly displays his Def Leppard collection.



After school, Sophomores Jerry Reece and Darrell Zemitis meet at their locker to talk about the day's events.

On many Friday nights, a mass of people piled in the cafeteria for a back-to-school dance, a beach party, or a sock hop to celebrate Halloween, end of the quarter, or just to bring in the new year. No matter what the title, people came to dance and socialize. The attire was casual pants or jeans and a comfortable shirt with an occasional new wave outfit here and there. Sound Tech played everything from Led Zeppelin to the Ramones. But if the dancer's feet were not up to " getting down," a slow dance with that certain someone was a pleasant change. Since so many of the dances were held right after football or basketball games, they made an enjoyable ending to memorable night.

Although shuttle lift-offs were more routine in 1983, one lift-off stood out above the rest. In late June Sally Kristen Ride, the first U.S. spacewoman, headed off with her four male crew members on the space shuttle Challenger. Half a million people went to the beaches of Cape Canaveral, Florida, to watch the lift-off. On the fifth day up, Ride and Air Force Colonel John Fabian began operating the 50-foot long remote-controlled mechanical arm. They retrieved a West German satellite from free flight and tucked it safely away in the cargo bay for use on a future mission. For the astronauts as well as many others, this was viewed as the mission's highlight. Ride insisted prior to the mission that she be treated the same as her male crewmates. Her feelings about being the first woman in space were summed up by this quote, "It's too bad that society isn't to the point yet where the country could just send up a woman astronaut in space and nobody would think twice about it."

December was supposed to be cold; however, in 1983 the temperatures hit a record low which proved to be an experience many would not forget. All over the U.S., record lows hit many states with such recorded temperatures as -52 F in Wisdom, Montana; -14 F in Indianapolis, Indiana; and 0 F in Atlanta, Georgia. Even in Florida, famed for its warm weather during the Christmas season, the cold wave struck hard and people were forced to wear such attire as sweaters and cords. Fruit crops were destroyed throughout the state and losses of 500 million dollars were recorded. Plumbing failures occurred throughout the country as well. In Washington D.C., leaks damaged two dozen federal buildings and in Ohio, broken pipes caused 200,000 dollars in the state's Supreme Court. In addition, power outages were widespread. Within the month, five hundred people died as a result of the drastic weather. For everyone, the memories of the weather in December were likely to remain for a long time.

On January 1, 1984, the fears an doubts about society, brough about by George Orwell's nove 1984 were put to rest (for the time be ing at least). The novel consisted of th plight of two lovers Winston and Julia who lived in the time when the world three superpowers: Oceania, Eurasia and Eastasia constanly battled although the pattern of alliances an hostilities kept changing. The officia language was Newspeak, a version o English pared down to erase all un wanted feelings and thoughts. Privac vanished as people were constanly wat ched by "Big Brother." The lover were relentlessly tortured in th dreaded room 101 for thei thoughtcrime of "Down with Bi Brother," and in the end, they suc cumbed to the torture and lost all trac of humanity. This story made the yea unsettling for many. Several o Orwell's predictions in the nove became reality; for instance, severa nations led under similar government in the novel. Orwell wrote 1984 as warning to all mankind what could hap pen if a "negative Utopia" began t sprout and grow. The thought of suc control occurring in the free world ha terrified many, although the new yea came with no ill effects. Though 198 was a grim look at the future worl George Orwell tried not so much as t paint a grim picture, but to fight th worst tendencies in politics and societ through his writing.

On December 3, 1983, over 100 million television viewers across America tuned in to watch The Day After, a movie about the aftermath of a nuclear holocaust.

Democratic Presidential candidate Jesse Jackson travelled to Syria in January of 1984 and helped release Marine Lt. Robert Goodman who was being held hostage by the Syrian government.

The Washington Redskins went down to Tampa, Florida to take on the Los Angeles Raiders in Superbowl XVIII. However, the Redskins were defeated 38-9.

Interior Secretary James Watt resigned his post after saying the remark, "We have every kind of mixture you can have. I have a black. I have a woman, two Jews and a cripple."

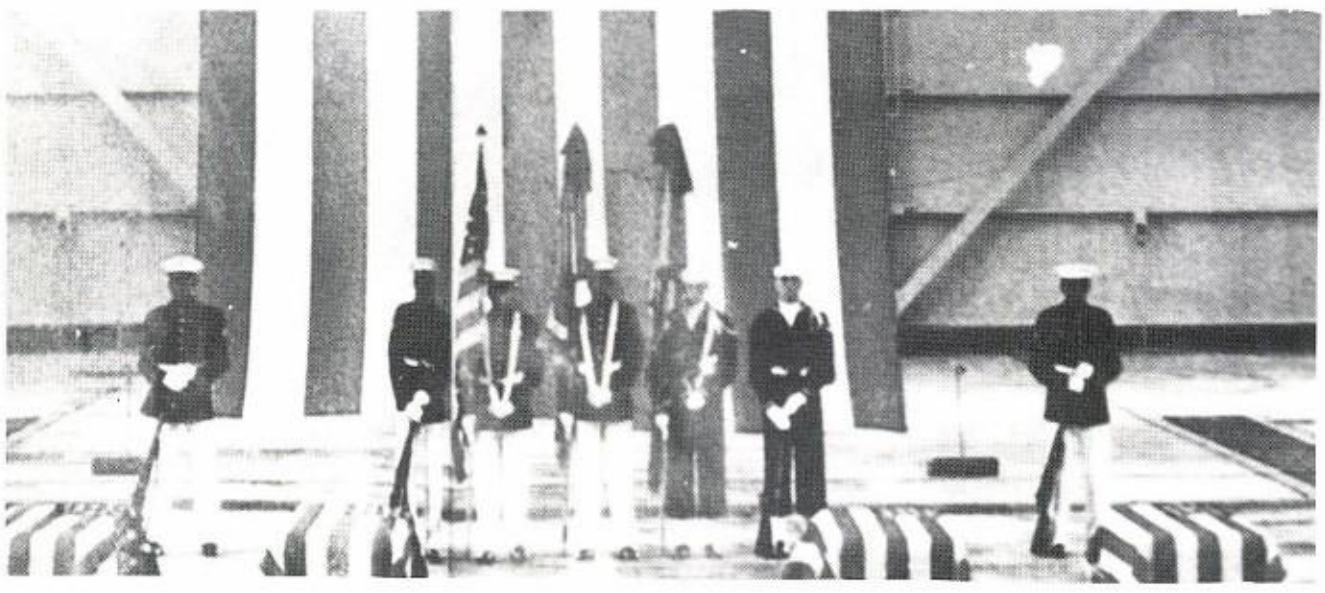
Singer Michael Jackson made history in 1983 when his LP Thriller sold more than 23 million copies worldwide, the most in history.

On February 10, 1984, Soviet Premier Yuri Andropov was pronounced dead after much speculation about his health when he was last seen in public almost six months ago.

The yacht Australia II became the first challenger to take the America's Cup during the races in the early fall of 1983.

For the first time in history, astronauts Bruce McCandless and Robert Stewert of the tenth flight of the space shuttle Challenger walked in space, free of any life-lines on February 7, 1984.

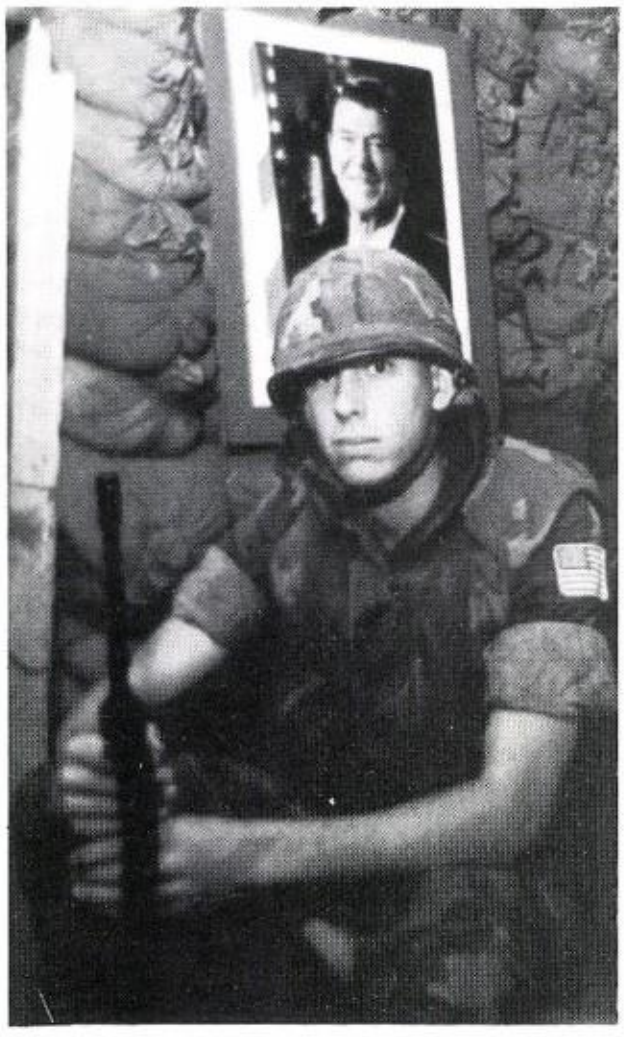
On January 1, 1984, the telephone company AT&T broke up into eight smaller companies as a result of a Supreme Court hearing declaring AT&T a monopoly that must be divided.



The Days of Our Lives

Straying over Soviet territory, Korean Airlines Flight 007 was shot down from the skies by a missile-firing Soviet interceptor in early September. All 269 passengers died, including over 61 Americans and U.S. Congressman Lawrence McDonald. This act sparked world outrage towards the Soviet Union. Several West European nations delivered protests over the shooting and in Seoul, Flight 007's destination, tens of thousands of South Koreans joined protest demonstrations. The Soviet Union remained silent on the matter for two days, then afterwards said that the airliner intruded deep into Soviet airspace, admitting that warning shots were fired. Weeks later, though, the pilot of the Soviet interceptor admitted that he was ordered to destroy the airplane. In retaliation, many nations suspended airline service to the U.S.S.R. for two weeks. President Reagan was criticized by many for his leniency when it came to sanctions against the Soviet Union. As a result of the shooting, the U.S.S.R.'s international relations were affected greatly. Unfortunately, this was no consolation for the families from 13 nations who lost loved ones on the doomed Flight 007.

In trying to maintain peace in war torn Lebanon, approximately 1200 U.S. Marines were sent to the country in late summer of 1983. French, British, Italians, and Americans comprised the peacekeeping forces to bolster the Gemayel government against Syrians, Palestinian guerillas and Israel, who were unwilling to withdraw from the country. However, on October 23, 1983, tragedy struck when the Battalion Landing Team Headquarters of the U.S. Marines was bombed by terrorists. At least 239 men died and 81 were wounded. In addition, a building which housed French paratroopers was also bombed, leaving almost 60 dead and 15 injured. The goal of the attacks was to drive the troops out of Lebanon. In the U.S., memorial services for the Marines were held throughout the country. Americans were horrified at the event and angry that such an event happened. In later months, the U.S. Marines remained in Lebanon as peacekeeping forces, but received permission from the U.S. administration to fire in the event of a hostile provocation. For the time being, the U.S. Marines beefed up security and remained in Lebanon, determined to hold the line.



On Tuesday, October 25, U.S. Marines invaded the tiny island of Grenada to protect the lives of 1000 Americans left on the island after a military coup. Six of Grenada's Carribean neighbors requested the U.S. action, yet many U.S. allies accused the U.S. of violating international law. However, to support its action, the Administration soon produced evidence that Grenada was becoming a Soviet-Cuban base. Cuban workers were found building an airstrip, supposedly built for transporting Soviet weapons. Within a matter of weeks, the Marines shipped the Cubans off the island and evacuated the American students as well. The Grenada invasion was questioned by many, since it was held just one day after the tragedy in Beirut. In addition, many found it intruiging that the press was forbidden from the island. After the completion of the mission, the U.S. Marines returned home, having stabilized the government of Grenada.

In a struggle for 112 days after his operation on December 1, 1982; Barney Clark, the world's first human to receive an artificial heart, died in his hospital room on March 30, 1983. Although the artificial heart was still in good working order, the patient was beset by other medical problems such as kidney failure, inflammation of the colon, and loss of blood pressure, and so Clark's doctors debated on what steps they would take to save his life. However, Clark's health rapidly deteriorated. The doctors consulted with his wife Una Loy and it was decided that the heart would be turned off. The official cause of death was "circulatory collapse due to multiorgan system failure." On an encouraging note for medical technology, the world's first mechanical heart-recipient survived six times longer than the first heart transplant patient. And although Barney Clark suffered, his gallant efforts were summed up by these words: "If I can make a contribution, my life will count for something."

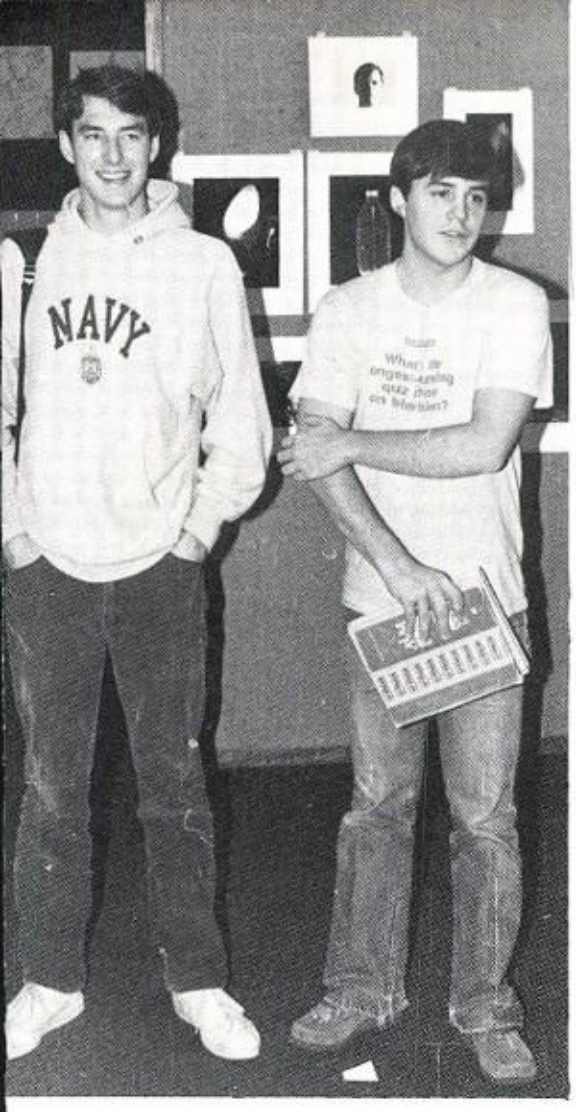
To be a member of the National Honor Society, a student had to demonstrate leadership and good character, have a GPA of 3.5 or better, and be at least a junior. The prestigious organization continued its one-to-one tutoring. It also took time out to visit Leewood Nursing Home. Aside from participation in the Fall Follies and car washes as fundraisers, the National Honor Society also provided college application workshops. As the year went by, there were guest speakers from a variety of organizations, such as WRC's Chester Panzer. A versatile background and an interest in helping others characterized members of the National Honor Society.

During an NHS meeting, Elaine Siatis liste attentively as plans are made for the F Follies.



Achievement Equals Interest

Students who excelled in math had the opportunity to apply for membership in the Math Honor Society, nationally known as Mu Alpha Theta. Prospective members not only had to have an academic standing in math, but also needed to complete a math project. A very successful service project of the club was tutoring--this year had the highest participation ever. Through good communication with the school and within the club, members of the Math Honor Society proved that working with numbers was fun.

Cultura Espanola

The Spanish Club and the Spanish Honor Society urged those students who were interested in the Spanish language to join. The Spanish Club was open to all interested students and participated in many events throughout the year such as Fall Festival and a dinner party at Casa Maria in March. The Spanish Honor Society was offered to all students in their second year of Spanish and required members to maintain a 3.0 overall average and a 3.5 average in Spanish. Some of the many activities the club sponsored were tutoring services and a booth at the Fall Festival. In addition, members represented the many Spanish speaking countries at the International Dinner. In short, the Spanish Club and the Spanish Honor Society did much to further the advancement of the Spanish language and culture throughout the school.

French Connection

By the end of the year the French Honor Society and French Club could proudly say, "Nous avons accompli." (We accomplished.) Members upheld traditional activities such as restaurant trips and Christmas caroling in French. The clubs also ordered T-shirts with a French idiom reading "Smile if You Speak French" across the front. President Wendy Hirst and Vice President Elaine Siatis initiated social events such as going downtown to see the French movie "Le retour de Martin Tuerre" and the successful International Dinner. At this dinner members of the French, German, and Spanish Honor Societies and Clubs became acquainted with each other and with different regional foods of the countries.

Breaking Barriers

Several members of the German Honor Society scored above ninety percent on the National German Test this year. Ranging from participation in the Fall Festival to its popular Gummi-bear sale, the organization completed several activities. It also participated in more regional activities such as Octoberfest and the German Convention in the spring. Scheduled later in the school year was a Trip to Pennsylvania Dutch Country to taste a little of the folk life. Pursuing the foreign language and emulating customs of the people, the German Honor Society proved cultural barriers could be broken.

Lori,
Well can you believe that we made it three this year? That's 2 under our belts now, together, Lori! By the time we finish 4 Va we'll really have a spent a lot of time together! I'll never forget how very nice you were to me the beginning of last year when I was new and feeling insecure and lonely. I've really enjoyed hearing you in so many of my classes! Mrs. Leira certainly has kept us busy this year! Can you believe that we'll never have to listen to an English panel again! Hallelujah! I'm really looking forward to starting college with you, Lori! It'll be so nice to know that there is someone there who I can talk to, if need be.

Have a wonderful summer and I'll see you in Charlottesville!

Love,
Jennifer

The heritage of Deutschland (Germany) and the German language were a common interest between the members of the German Club. Students participated in many cultural activities throughout the year. At the Fall Festival, students sold Gummi Bears and German trinkets. Later in the year, club members were invited to Randolph-Macon to join the V.O.G.S.(Virginia Organization of Virginia German Students) convention. In the spring, Club and Honor Society members participated in a county-wide foreign language festival at Langley High School. It is no surprise that all these students grin when asked,"Sprechen Sie Deutsch?"

Latin Bowl Victory

Latin Team participants.

Capturing the third place title in the Certamen held at Jefferson High School, Latin Team members Bob Ward, Pete Ward, Melissa Burroughs, and Mary Beth Wooten acclaimed pride in Latin achievement. Different Certamens were held during the year, and were conducted similarly to "It's Academic," only on the Latin subject. Members of the Latin Team had to research and study grammar and poetry of Latin prior to attending the Certamen. Any student who signed up in Ms. Bartelmes' room could participate in the Certamen, but to be a member of the Latin Honor Society one had to have an overall 3.0 and a current 3.5 and be at least in his second year of Latin. As a service to the school, the Latin Honor Society tutored lower level students having trouble. Any interested student could be a member of the Latin Club. Topping the year with the traditional picnic at Burke Lake, members of the Latin Team, Latin Honor Society, and the Latin Club saluted another year of determination and enjoyment in the ancient tongue and civilization.

Key to Success

This year proved to be one of the most successful in the history of the Keyettes as they sponsored and helped with many more community and school service projects. Continuing traditional activities such as Santa Grams, flowers for Valentine's Day, and the annual Wolf Trap Park International Children's Festival, the Keyettes also added several new services to their long list. One such project was helping with the annual Wakefield Park Halloween Extravaganza. Again the Keyettes sponsored their yearly Food Drive for the needy and the Red Cross Blood Drive, both of which were a tremendous success. Most proceeds went to benefit Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS), the club's international project. Another memorable event for this year's Keyettes was the initiation into the club. This year's prospective members were "kidnapped" and taken to breakfast to celebrate their acceptance.Throughout the year Keyettes proved that patience, hard work, and a concern for others was the key to success.

Service all Around

Throughout the year the Key Club proved why it was one of the school's most popular club's. The club continued to serve the school and its members by selling tickets at sporting events, serving refreshments at graduation, and selling P.T.A. memberships as well as school calendars at Back to School Night. Money was raised to aid the club in attending the Regional Convention. The club was given the 1982-83 Superior Award for their dedicated work in membership and outstanding development program. Acceptance into the club entailed completing an application and obtaining teacher recommendation; however, much energy, pride, and dedicaton predominated all requirements. Without the Key Club many school as well as community events would have been chaotic. Thus hard work and incentive to take action opened the door to accomplishment for the Key Club and its members.

AAAA Champs

Marching Band members enthusiastically cheer as the Bruins score a touchdown against the Rams.

During an assembly, the Marching Band performs "Broadway."

For the third consecutive year, the Marching Band finished the season as Virginia state AAAA champs. The band's success was largely due to the long, hard hours each member spent perfecting routines with the help of sponsor Carl Bly and summer instructor Bob Wall. In the Mount Vernon Marching Band Classic, the Color Gaurd placed second in the open class, and the band took the award for best brass section in addition to the overall title. Carl Bly was recognized as the best director. With these victories under their belt, the Marching Band went on to capture the Virginia Band and Orchestra Association class AAAA Band award at the Virginia State Marching Band Competition. Once again, the Colorguard placed second, and Mr. Bly was again named the best director. The overall points the Marching Band received singled them out as the best band in the state of Virginia. As a result, the band was invited to perform at the Citrus Bowl in Florida. Thinking ahead to next year, Mr. Bly said, "Oh yeah, it will be good next year. Winning state titles is tough so we'll have to see about that, but I have high hopes."

"Due to a shortage of members during basketball and soccer seasons, we were forced to cut Pep Club support down to just the varsity football games," said Jennifer Patel, co-president of the club. Despite the shortened season, the Pep Club managed to to participate in many school activities. During the Fall Follies, the club performed a skit based on the song "I'd Like to Teach the World to Sing." At the Fall Festival, the club sold decorative wreaths and lollipops. Leftover wreaths were later distributed among the residents at the Leewood Nursing Home. The season ended on an up-note when Pep Club patches and third year pins were given to the most active members. Next year the club plans to increase it's membership in order to support more athletic events.

It was difficult to explain exactly what Younglife was to a student who had never attended a meeting. The mystery could only be solved by joining the group during one of their Wednesday night gatherings. During the meetings, regular members participated in skits, sang songs and shared common beliefs. Dedicated counselors encouraged members to develop new friendships as well as their faith in God. "Younglife meetings are almost like parties, except we get high on life instead of beer,"remarked one member who added, "It's an experience everyone should have." An extra attraction to the club was a retreat to Hill Top Ranch in Maryland. The trip proved to be a great success. Kim Burtnett, an active participant in the club, concluded, "The whole year was a lot of fun. I'm already looking forward to next year!"

Service With A Smile

Before the Host and Hostess meeting begins, co-president Dawn Mayfield and sponsor Mrs. Messinger review last minute items.

"Host and Hostess Club is an organization available to the staff that performs small services, such as pouring coffee, passing out programs and ushering at school functions," replied Dawn Mayfield, co-president of the club. Through out the year the club performed various services, ranging from baking cookies to helping at graduation. On Back to School Night, members helped to guide lost parents around the school. The club also hosted teacher conferences and other related meetings. The club's major projects included Graduation and Baccalaureate. To be a member of the club, students had to turn in an application and go through a personal interview. Club members were required to maintain average grades and be recommended by their teachers.

They Do It All For You

"Tri-Hi-Y is a worthwhile club to be in, yet the members have to work hard," replied Florence Novi, a member of the club. Tri-Hi-Y, a service club, completed various service projects in and around the school to help other clubs, families or the entire school. These service projects included cleaning up the football field on Saturday morning, helping on beautification and having bake sales. The club also sponsored a needy family. The family was given food, clothes and the small children received toys. On Halloween, the club dressed in costumes and visited Leewood, a nursing home. To become a member of the club, students were required to participate in various service projects and earn a number of points. Students also had to be recommended by their teachers and keep average grades.

Full Service

"The main purpose of Junior Civitan is to give support and help to other people," observed Brandi Drago, president of the club. Throughout the year, Junior Civitan contributed greatly to a variety of charitable programs. During the Christmas season, the club sold Claxton fruitcake at Springfield Mall to benefit the mentally retarded. Members also supported the Special Olympics by acting as "Huggers" for the young athletes. In addition, members attended a three day Spring District Convention at Ocean City. At this time, new officers were elected and activities were planned for next year.

Safety First

Students interested in protecting the school and community from needless accidents joined S.A.D.D. (Students Against Drunk Driving) and the Safety Council. Throughout the year, both clubs placed specific emphasis on driving hazards. While S.A.D.D. pointed out the dangers of drunk driving, the Safety Council stressed the importance of wearing seat belts. In addition, both clubs sponsored a safety week. At this time, students were encouraged to drive with good judgment and to obey the speed limit. Safety Council members also visited Orange Hunt Elementary School to put on a play exhibiting good safety measures to be taken during Halloween. By the end of the year, members of both clubs felt as though they had made a significant contribution to the school.

Hidden Talents

Every year, hundreds of fascinating, intelligent, pieces of art and literature were drawn and written by creative and not so creative students of Lake Braddock. Much of the talent was often hidden away in notebooks, diaries, doodle pads and minds. But then came Chimera; Lake Braddock's art and literary magazine compiled by and for students. In past years, students didn't hear about Chimera very readily and weren't sure how to go about submitting work. This past year, the idea of a submission box placed in all the subschools evolved. Students could submit art, including photographs, drawings, and designs; and literature such as short stories, poetry, or essays. Much of the work in the magazine was created by students in English and creative writing classes where they had time to write, revise, and perfect. When a work was submitted, a staff member (or members) rated the entry on a point scale of 1 to 5. After being sorted with other writings, members chose which works would be used for publication. The staff of twenty members were all interested volunteers and were lead by the remaining staff members from last year. The editors were Katie Stafford and Wendy Hirst. Sponsors were Ms. Murray, Ms. Duffy, and Mr. Evelyn.

Creation

Wednesdays and Thursdays provided special days for some students at Lake Braddock. Those days brought the meetings of the Art and Photography clubs. For students who had no room on their schedules for a variation of any of these classes, they provided a terrific chance to excercise their unique interest in the subject. For students who did take art or photography in school, their club let them refine their talents. A name better known as the Art Club became the Lake Braddock Design Company. Creating art and beautifying the school, yet at the same time teaching students various skills, was the main purpose of the Design Company. They held a craft show in the spring selling different crafts they had created. A workshop was held for making silver and porcelain earrings for anyone who had a personal interest. The Photography Club was an organization that was comprised of students who took a photography class. Members enjoyed using the time for personal reasons. It gave them a chance to be more creative in their work than they could in a class assignment. This time was also valuable in preparing for the Scholastic Photography Contest in which many photo students competed. Whether it was art or photography, students had an opportunity in both clubs to add personal style to their work without the pressures of a class.

Now & Later

The D.E.C.A. and F.B.L.A. clubs provided many students with a chance to improve their business skills and experience a wide range of vocational careers. Students who were enrolled in a business course or in a distributive education class were eligible to join the clubs. The clubs participated in many interesting events throughout the year. For instance, D.E.C.A. (Distributive Education Clubs of America) attended the Employer-Employee Banquet and also made a field trip to Baltimore Harbor. These experiences along with other events helped the members learn about and find jobs dealing with merchandising, advertising, market research, and sales promotion. The F.B.L.A. (Future Business Leaders of America) club participated in The Spring Leadership Conference at NOVA. This activity allowed the members to test their skills in various competitive events such as stenography, typing, accounting, and data processing. Both clubs gave eligible students needed experience for possible future careers.

Preparing for the Future

Students interested in homemaking joined organizations such as F.H.A. (Future Homemakers of America) and H.E.R.O. (Home Economics Related Occupations). Both clubs worked in developing cooking skills by preparing a variety of dishes that were served at a faculty Christmas dinner. The members not only learned how to care for young children, but also for senior citizens. During the holiday season, the clubs visited Leewood Nursing Home and sang Christmas carols. In addition to these projects, the students were taught about nutrition, economics, and consumer information. Throughout the year, major emphasis was placed on creating unity within the family.

"It was the most exciting time in my life!" exuberated Valerie Dean. She had the opportunity to be an exchange student to Germany during the summer, sponsored by the AFS club (short for American Field Service). Upon arriving in Germany, Valerie engaged in a three day crash course of the native language. While learning how the Germans live, she also took tours and and spoke with Parliament members. Continuing to fulfill its promise to make foreign students feel at home in the U.S., the AFS club had such projects as a workshop in Bethesda, guest speakers, and bake sales. The club also hosted a Christmas party at Lake Braddock, inviting exchange students from other schools in the area. Also in store for the year was a student exchange program with another school in the country, where students would trade places for a few days. If students had any interest in other cultures or lifestyles, they were eligible to be members of the AFS club.

The primary purpose of both the Afro-American and the Korean Clubs was to reinforce pride in one's heritage. The clubs sponsored fund-raising projects such as dances and bakesales; both participated in the Fall Festival. While helping non-English speaking students, the Korean Club at the same time preserved its language. Becoming better acquainted with other people in its organization at other schools was a goal of the Afro-American Club. Both clubs planned trips to museums and had guest speakers. The Afro-American Club planned to see the Harlem Dance Company downtown, while the Korean Club had a trip to historic Williamsburg scheduled. Also featured by the Afro-American Club was a display in the showcase during Black History Month. A dance was organized by the Korean Club, and at a soul food dinner the Afro-American Club gave awards to graduating seniors. Both clubs continued to help generate a warm feeling among a many-culture student body.

Fast Thinking!

Throughout the year, the Forensic and Debate teams were at their best. The Forensic Team competed in the George Mason University Forensic Showcase, The National Forensic League, and numerous other tournaments. The team proceeded to take top honors in many competitions. The money raised throughout the year paid for many expenses such as judges' fees, trips, and dues to leagues. The Debate Team competed in a wider range of tournaments. One such competition was the Race Round University Tournament in New York, which consisted of the six best teams in the United States. The Team easily took first place in the competition making them the best in the nation and adding to the numerous trophies and awards won over the years. Both clubs offered students a chance to show their debating skills in exclusive tournaments. During the course of the year the Debate and Forensic teams proceeded to take top honors in many ranges of tournaments and competitions proving that they had what it takes to be the best.

Students who enjoyed fast-paced mental challenges were encouraged to join the Math Team or the "It's Academic" Team. Although there were no formal membership requirements for either club, participants were expected to exhibit some enthusiasm and potential. Members progressed through several interest sessions. The "It's Academic" Team had meetings on a liberal basis, but when meetings were held, sponsor Mrs. Glaze drilled each member on many of the various subjects to help prepare them for the televised matches against other schools. During a primary match against Archbishop Carroll, the team easily took first place. The Math Team, however, was more informal. Students attended several meetings and tried to solve difficult problems. Those students that solved a high percentage of problems were invited to compete with other schools in the area. Through the long hours of remembering, memorizing, and reasoning, students from both teams felt that association with the clubs had left them with a sense of accomplishment and had proved to be remarkable experience.

Logical Deductions

Computers-a now common household word-have begun to enthuse many students at Lake Braddock. Whether someone was interested in creating, exchanging, or just learning about programs, the computer clubs existed for them. The clubs, now in their first year, were composed of two divisions: a seventh grade club and an eighth grade club. Mrs Brothers, the sponsor of the eighth grade computer club, said that the principal purpose of both clubs was to gather together interested students in computer knowledge and literacy. The Atari 800's provided hours of enjoyment and challenge. Who knows, future robots could have been in the making.

For those who were interested in the audio-visual experience, the A-V Club was formed. The A-V Club offered information and training on the technical uses of audio-visual equipment such as video cameras and recorders. Overall the club proved to be an excellent opportunity for students to become better acquainted with the technical operations of standard video equiptment.

Opting for a change in pace, the seventh and eighth grade drill teams merged to form the Intermediate Drill Team. Many days after school, the Intermediate Gymnastics Team practiced to perfect complicated routines. Under the supervision of sponsor Jean Worthington, the girls developed skills in tumbling, balance beam, and other difficult routines. To be selected as a member, candidates had to perform individual routines and be evaluated. Throughout the year, the team peformed at intermediate functions and assemblies. The Science Fiction Club was an organization sponsored by AP Biology teacher Mr. Rumlik. The club saw movies, read top Sci-Fi magazines and books; they also attended exclusive conferences. The conferences included the Balticon, the Disclave, and during the summer the club attended the Unicon at the University of Maryland. The members met bi-weekly to exchange reading materials and information. They also sponsored a Science Fiction writing contest during the winter months, which proved to be a huge success. Out Of This World

Students with an interest in scientific research, discussion or lab experiments were urged to join the Science Club. The club covered a wide variety of sciences ranging from astronomy to physics. Experiments, lectures and guest speakers were common occurrences within the club, as students became better acquainted with the many studies. During the second semester, a telescope was purchased and the astronomy club was formed. Members spent many evenings charting star patterns and moon phases. The results of the charts were later explained and discussed by the entire club. By the end of the year, members of both clubs had further increased their knowledge of astronomy and astrology.

County representative Kristy Geiger gains input from Kathy Hasset on unexcused absence penalties.

Setting Standards

This year, the SAC (Student Advisory Council) was more active then ever before. Members met once a month to discuss issues affecting the student body. Among the topics discussed were substance abuse, t-shirts bearing beer slogans and the penalties concerning unexcused absences. The members spent many hours meeting with area SACs and students to discuss ways in which to solve problems within the school. In addition, a substance abuse committee was organized to help find solutions to prevent and control drug and alcohol consumption. Ideas presented by the committee helped to form the illegal substance rules listed in the school pamphlet. Although the SAC wasn't able to influence all rules, the group managed to contribute a great deal to the welfare of every student.

SAC members Vince Santivicca, Trent Kubo and Kristy Geiger discuss the illegal substance rules.

Before a meeting with area schools, Kristy Geiger and Trent Kubo discuss the agenda with Mr. Bailey.

Paying Their Dues

Unlike other athletic teams, Lacrosse was considered to be a club rather than a sport. Team members were required to pay equipment dues for the use of jerseys, crosses and safety gear. Dennis Stewart, sponsor of the club said, "Half of the county has to be active participants in order for Lacrosse to receive sport status. It'll take a while for that to happen. In the meantime, we'll enjoy the competition." Throughout the season, the club played highly regarded teams such as St. Stephens and DeMathis. Skill, exhibited during the games, proved that the club contained true athletic talent. By the end of the year, the team had demonstrated that Lacrosse was a sport in all but a name.

After six deadlines, 384 pages, good times, bad times, and literally blood, sweat, and tears, the 1984 Lair yearbook staff proudly announces that after all we've been through WE ARE DONE. Pictured above are yearbook staff members at their best.

In the drama department office, Shareen Gustafson uses her class time to arrange costumes for an up-coming play.

As Mrs. Frie lectures her third period class, Art Grace, Hyun Choe, Nikki Cotton, and Tim Tisler are distracted by the photographer.

On August 29, 1983, the main hall of Lake Braddock, that stretched one-fifth of a mile, was packed with 4,349 students all beginning a year of changes, modifications, disappointments and surprises. High temperatures lasted well into September and even closed school two hours early on one occasion. Although the summer weather lasted into the school year, students began forming routines and looking forward to June 1984. Banning drug and alcohol insignias on T-shirts and in lockers raised controversy among students. Entering the second year of a "no tobacco" policy and eight minutes between classes, students saw a continued separation of high school and intermediate students occur without any problems. Gentlehands, a book required for seventh grade reading, caused controversy with some parents and the on-going disagreement over whether books should be banned continued involving students and teachers. The vitality and spirit of the students began early in the year and carried through all the traditional Homecoming events, despite the agonizing loss to Fort Hunt in the Homcoming Game. With an ever increasing variety of classes to choose from, students earned credits toward their diplomas. The Gifted and Talented (GT) program (started in September 1983) offered a challenge to those students who wanted to carry their studies even further. The advanced diploma to be given in 1985, found many juniors scrambling to meet all necessary credits and compelled underclassmen to plan carefully for whatever options they intended to use. Because of the concern for academic classes, The Swing Singers created a "zero" period every morning from 7:20 to 8:10 in order to keep all credits. With the vocational and career training classes thriving, Lake Braddock continued to offer specific classes such as auto-mechanics and cosmetology to those students who knew their future careers. Success was the

Helping to cheer on the class of '85, Dave Duhadway, Erin Corning and Cathleen Deronja watch as the SGA sets up for the tug-of-war, waiting for their class-night event.

After school Becky Edwards, Amy Evetts, Shelly Fleming, Amy Fragnito, and Clythie Clarken gather in front of a locker to discuss the day's important events and to begin the night's homework.

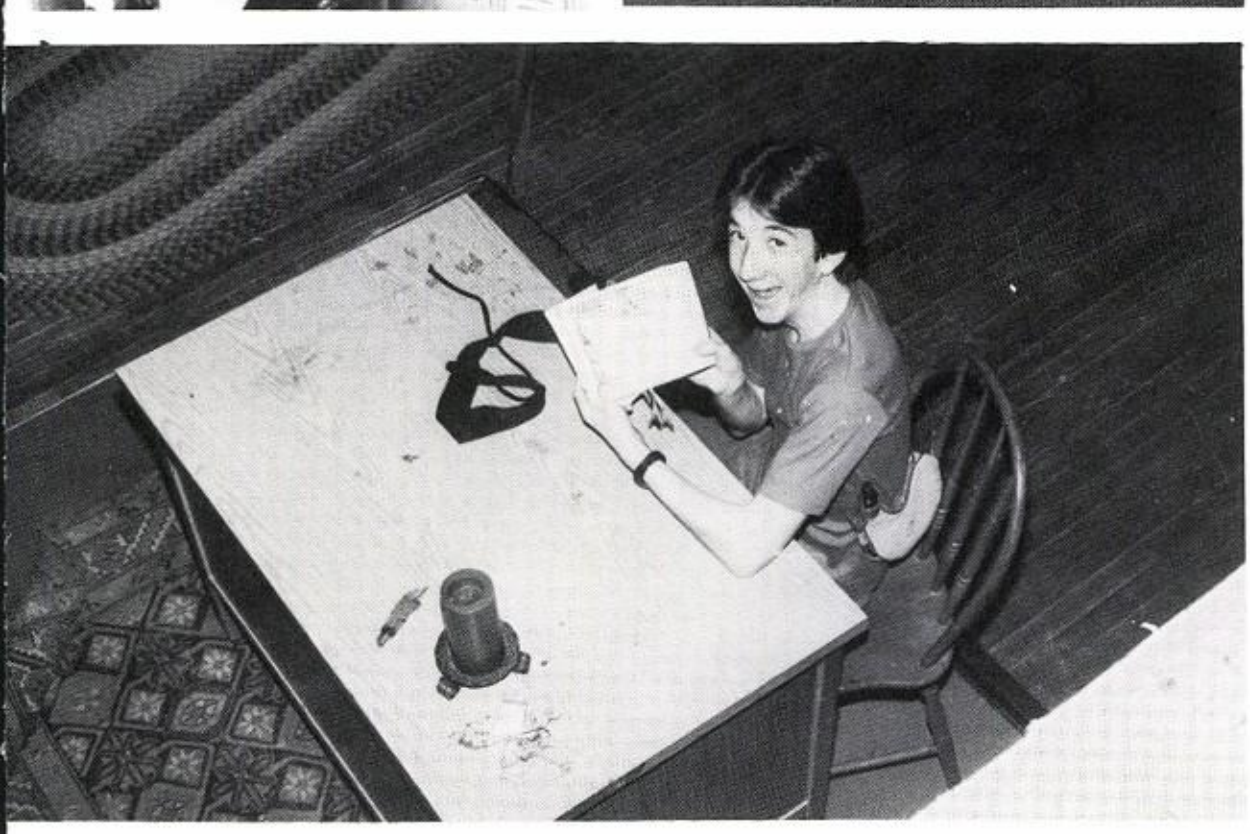
After mailing the current issue of The Bear Facts, journalism students Michelle Dumas and Gary Powers begin laying out the next issue.

Drama classes give Gretchen Rinehart, Liz Stauffer, Denise DiRisio, Elizabeth Pago, Bibi Faudale, and Shasa Stowell a chance to use ~~their~~ creativity as well as develop close friendships.

Considering the size of Lake Braddock, many people wonder how students communicate. Adriane Johnson and Steve Sloss prove that the main hall gives students an opportunity to see friends even if they have no classes together.

Finding a quiet place to rest, Lisa Mulholland pauses to relax before class.

Preferring the floor to the bleachers, Joey Phillips, Pete Stewart, Greg Smith, Ken Brandon and Vincent Moseley watch the clothes relay during Class Nite.



On their way home, Scott Foust and Dallas Henderson stop to chat with Candy and Cari DiRisio as they decorate their locker.

Carpeting that covers the interior of each of the six subschools and various places throughout the school gives Lake Braddock a more casual atmosphere as well as a cushion for Jill Lestico as she talks to Scott Stevens.

Using his class time wisely, Adam Perna looks over the script for The Devil of the Second Stairs.

Pausing at his locker before sixth period, John Martel explains that only the hat and boots of a Dallas Cowboy remain after being beaten by the Washington Redskins.

BIG YEAR

only word the Marching Band heard as they continued to add innumerable awards to its cause, including a Quad-A Championship. The band and color guard were not the only school organizations to be successful in 1983-84. Capturing a second place award at a regional cheerleading competition, the fall Varsity Cheerleaders qualified for a national competition in Dallas, Texas, but they were unable to attend due to a lack of funds. A District title was captured by the Varsity Field Hockey team. Keeping with their outstanding record, the Debate team added award after award to their credit. Anything Goes was performed by the Drama Department and attracted parents and students alike for two hours of entertainment. Old man winter brought in record breaking cold temperatures throughout the nation as well as noticeable changes for Lake Braddock. The Boys' Varsity Basketball Team worked hard, and it paid off with an outstanding record and the respect they deserved. On January 22, 1984, the Washington Redskins found themselves in Tampa, Florida, gearing up for Superbowl XVIII against the Los Angeles Raiders. Suffering an agonizing defeat, the Redskins returned home to fans who were determined to show their support through thick and thin. Revised for the first day of the third quarter, substance abuse and attendance regulations were made stricter. One of the biggest changes was the decrease of five unexcused absenses to three for automatic failure of the quarter. Dr. Bob Davis, Subschool V principal, retired and was replaced by Mrs. Betsy Smith. Mrs. Alice Brown, swithchboard operator of nine years also retired. Many students noticed that they were suddenly surrounded by walls, making Lake Braddock even more "closed." National events such as terrorist bombings, the invasion of Grenada, and continued turmoil in Lebanon left people hoping for peace in the future. Not just the size of the school, but also the content, the feelings, the successes, the hopes, and the people of Lake Braddock were a BIG DEAL in 1984.

Enjoying the warm weather of the Fall Festival, Kim Clark takes a moment out from the excitement to study the atmosphere.

Scott Brown and Anthony Beverina put their heads together while studying the laws of motion in Mr. McQuade's physics class.

Dedication outweighs the grueling heat for Alicia Kost during marching band practice in August.

On their way to second period, Robyn Chambers and Ann Hyatt share a moment of laughter together as they talk about their weekend.

Anticipation

The tension was building. The pressure was mounting. Stress, tension- until Shazam! Summer vacation. Ever since the end of the Winter holidays, the Junior-Senior ski trip, Class night, and the closing of the basketball season, Lake Braddock's student body greatly anticipated the end of school; for all these events marked the end of half the year. Students were becoming bored with their usual routine; day after day- the same. Oh! to be rid of those annoying trivialities that came with school: alarm clocks, slush covered sidewalks, tardy bells, short tempered teachers, and homework, homework, homework! Soon chemistry equations were replaced by images of sea green waters and sandy beaches. The scent of sun tan lotion and the sound of a radio teased the senses. Who could wait for the late weeknights and sleeping in late instead of late buses? What could be more perfect than having the freedom of spending an entire day- an entire week for that matter- at the pool, playing tennis or just sleeping? All these thoughts were soon to become reality as students anticipated the end of school, and the beginning of relaxation.

As a favorite warm weather pastime, sailing is enjoyed by many Lake Braddock students. Here, Steven Engle enjoys a trip on the Baltimore Inner Harbor during summer vacation.

Contemplating the thought of painting the remainder of the press box bewilders Kath Kix for a moment, but she later finishes the job along with other members of the Senior class before the start of the school year.

A joke can always make a class period pass more quickly as shown by Jenny Jagelski during her third period class.

Although good friends are hard to come by, Jennifer Robb, Tracey Kennedy, and Andrea Gurinsky show that they've found some during their Spanish class.

The cover of the 1984 Lair was a maroon 360 Fabrikoid material with blind debossed lettering. Regular black and white pictures were printed on 80 lb enamel paper, manufactured by the West Virginia Paper Company. The endsheets were of 60 lb cover weight maroon paper. All production and typesetting was done by Lake Braddock students. The book was printed in Paoli, Pennsylvania by Taylor Publishing Company. The staff would like to thank John Carpenter, Jeff Segall and Mike Kidd from Segall Majestic; Tom Scarry, our Taylor Publishing Company represenative, and Dr. Pat McCarthy, for all their help. We'd also like to welcome our new MDC-350 terminal and our new sponsors Joan Strokes and Joan Frie.

Dear Lori,

Last year in Axelrod's class you sat on the opposite side of the room and aired all of your opinions which I thought were very opposite of mine! This year, you sat at my government table and we realized that we don't think alike. Although we have dress similarly, and I found new respect for you, I don't act or dress like you at all. Thank goodness we won't have assignments like UYA (though I hope I will probably be much lucker and then we will go far!

Love,
Wendy

Hello! (I guess I should first start out with a 2nd period Jeffrey Jones greeting.) Well chick, looks like we've made it. Its about time too. Through the agony of homework, studying and our curfews, we've managed to have some mighty fine times together. This years though, it seemed like we constantly got in trouble alot togeth but the good time we had covered up for the bad times. W both kind of corrupted each other, but it matters cuz w were seniors and we only live once. Our Senior summe began at the University of Maryland. Super Star Drill Teamers through all the sweat and the burning sun. Its a wonder how we all survived. I never sweated so much before in my life. Remember our E.T. impression & the Hear No Evil, See No Evil & Speak No Evil pose. It was great. If you ever want to know what we ate, did, when we slept practice etc., remember I wrote everything in my little handy dandy notebook. Keep laughing at me. Drill Team in the summ was great, we must have lost at least 10 pounds each. The car washes were fun too, I'll always remember us standing in the median strip of Rolling Road yelling "Carwash", holding our signs upside down and being subject to all the whistles from the perverts & workmen driving by. Yeahness. Remember our Surfin' Routine and the endless hours we spent polishing up that routine. That was a gay ending. Let's all run across the whole field with Lori & Renée trying to throw a beach ball back and forth with our hawaiin leaks and our glam sunglasses. Pressbox Painting was Awesome. I was never so proud of the numbers 84 till then, we officially became the Senior of '84. My shoes are still purple and gold splotched. Remember us writing on the opposite side of the wall?
